THANKSGIVING

To-morrow, the people of Canada unite in General Thanksgiving to the Supreme Head of the Universe for the prosperity and happiness that have attended them during the past year. The occasion should be one to call out whatever good is in man. While all have not met with the same degree of success, while many will have cause to remember the year with feelings of pain, there is not the man or woman existing, who has not good reason to fall upon his or her knees in solemn thanksgiving to God, for the mercies of the year. Especially in this Dominion have we reason to praise the Almighty. The year has been prosperous, a successful future for our country is more than ever assured, and for these blessings alone, the people of this wide Dominion to-morrow in their churches and around the family hearth will solemnly thank the Giver of all good.

Canadian Home Rule.

Lord Lorne in the November number of the Contemporary Review has an article on Canadian Home Rule. He discusses the principal features of the Federal Government of the Dominion, and dwells upon the apparent danger which might arise, should one Province of the Confederation become strong enough, and should be inclined to oppose the central power. The writer is of the opinion that should provincial feeling arise stronger than the attachment to the British Crown, WHICH HAVING BEEN WELL the civil war of the United States would be repeated in Canada. The experience of the Ame.ican States, he adds, shows that while purely local matters may be left to the Local Assemblies, it is all important that no Province should be organized so strongly as to be able to formulate a policy leading to a con- the Queen vs. Forrest were first sworn and owned in Fredericton. flict with the rest of the country.
