Miscellaneous.

The Night Before the Mowing. Oh, the night before the mowing, When the warm south wind was blowing, It was pleasant and sweet to pass Ankle-deep through flowers and grass— Grass and flowers so proudly blowing On the night before the mowing.

But when next my feet went straying, Men were busy with their hay; I saw the sharp scythe swiftly pass Through nodding flowers and blowing grass, Till blowing grass so proudly blowing Underneath the hot sun-drying.

Then should I mow with wondrous zest; And flowers and grass, as bleaching hay, Had learned the meaning of the May, And why they were so proudly blowing On the night before the mowing.

When is a man like a brick? When he is hard pressed. A wife is called a better half because a man had better half her than not half her.

Eating onions not only keeps the lips from chapping, but keeps the chaps from lipping. A man's conscience should be quick like the eye, and like an eyelid to shut itself against evil.

No matter how peaceable a meeting is the people composing it always have to be called to order. It is easy to criticise what is wrong in another man's life, but a very difficult thing to really do much better than he does.

The difference between a besotted man and a pig is a slight one at best. One's a hunting grog and the other's a grunting hog.

A shoemaker having been divorced four times has just married his fifth wife, and people are now advising him to stick to his last.

An editor, in acknowledging the gift of a peck of onions from a subscriber, says: "It is such kindnesses as these that bring tears to our eyes."

A bad man is like an earthen vessel, easy to break and hard to mend. A good man is like a golden vessel, hard to break and easy to mend.

Said the conductor of a slow-going train to an impatient traveller: "No, we are not much on annihilating space on this road, but we do manage to kill a good deal of time."

It is the same old story. Two farmers had a dispute about the boundary lines of their farms. Their disputes are now settled, and so are the lawyers—on their farms.

People of sedentary habits, and all who are subject to constipation, can keep in good condition, by a moderate use of Ayer's Pills—the surest, safest and most reliable Cathartic.

"My son," said a man of doubtful morals, putting his hand on the head of a youngurchin, "I believe Satan has got hold of you. 'I believe so too,' the urchin replied.

There is no pain, no matter how severe nor what the cause, that cannot be partly or wholly relieved by Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, used internally and externally. Send to us for testimonials widely and most fully known to medical men.

"Jane," said a fond mother the other morning to her daughter, "did Daniel Johnson kiss you on the steps last night?" "No, mamma, he did not." "If the fond parent had said mouth instead of steps it would have troubled Jane to reply.

J. E. Kennedy, dispensing chemist, Colburn, says that no blood purifier that he has ever handled has had such a large sale as Burdock Blood Bitters, and adds, "in no case have I heard a customer say ought but words of high praise for its remedial qualities."

At a railway station lately an elderly Irish woman, who had arrived a few seconds after the train had started, set off to run after it. She, of course, soon came to a halt, when she began to abuse against the engine, adding with a "nate" brogue: "Faugh! the great black ugly lump! When she gets as old as me she won't run so quick."

"You are charged with carrying whiskey away from an illicit distillery. Silas. 'What have you to say to the charge?' 'I ain't guilty, sah. I didn't carry it.' 'You had some, then?' 'Yes, sah, I had some.' 'What did you do with it?' 'Well, sah, all that I had was inside ob me, an' I had no jess stayed dar.'"

"Deacon," said the widow, as she gently stroked in a feline manner, the malted barley that evidently lay in her lap for that purpose, "don't you long for spring, with its balmy breath, its warm sunshine and its gentle showers, which awakens nature, and puts life in dead during up out of the cold, cold everything up out of the cold, cold ground into light and life?" "Well, hardly, widow," responded the old deacon, "you know I buried my second wife last fall."

A clergyman in Tennessee is known as the "satisfying preacher." Whenever a church begins to grow tired of its regular pastor the "satisfying preacher" is sent for. And so atrociously is he that after hearing him once or twice the congregation is entirely "satisfied" to keep the pastor it has. An exchange believes that a new avenue of usefulness is thus opened to poor preachers. They will act as a sort of counterpoise to those peripatetic preachers who show eloquence often causes a congregation to be dissatisfied with its humdrum pastor.

Agriculture.

It takes three days of good food to make up for one of bad food. The record for pacing stallions has not been changed for ten years.

There is no loss in feeding cattle well, for the sake of the manure alone. The faster the fattening the more profits—less food, early returns and better flesh.

The best and most natural flooring for hen-houses, all things considered, is dry earth or sand. A heaping spoonful of saleratus in a pint of milk, given at one dose, gives relief for colic in horses.

One habit is marked as to be almost peculiar to the Jersey, and that is her disposition to carry her flow of milk for a long period. The hog population of the United States, according to the last census, was 48,000,000. Counting them at $14 per head—the average value of a fat hog—there would be $672,000,000 worth of pork.

At this season of the year give your sheep plenty of pure fresh water. Avoid stagnant pools and marshes—far around these are deposited the eggs from which the loblombr and other destroyers of our sheep are hatched.

The largest cattle-farm in the world is in Texas and is owned by Charles Goodright. It comprises 700,000 acres, and takes 250 miles of fencing to enclose it. But it is not yet very thickly stocked with cattle, there being but 40,000 of them.

In Germany, during the slippery season, temporary calks are used for horseshoes. Two sharp pointed studs an inch long are screwed in holes left in the shoe, and when the horse enters the stable, they are taken out and a butty screwed into their place, thereby preventing all damage to the horse and keeping the screw-holes from filling.

A contemporary thinks it is unwise practice to use either currycomb or brush while the horse is eating. Let him have his food without being disturbed. "Men do this foolish thing with the idea that it saves time. If he might save time to drive the horse to his daily task without taking any food at all."

Any cause that interferes with the condition of the cow after calving may produce milk fever. Exposure, too much exercise or nervous excitement are sufficient to bring on an attack, and a recovery is rare. It is the "ounce of prevention" in this case, as in so many others, that is worth the pound of cure. Keep the animal quiet for a week before and after calving, and nurse her well.

New Brunswick farmers do not pay sufficient attention to their agricultural implements when they put them aside after use. They are often left outside, subject to the ravages of the weather, and the consequence is, when they are wanted again, they are not fit for use. A more liberal use of oil, after being thoroughly cleaned and placed under cover, would save the machinery from rust and consequent decay, and make it last much longer.

It is a great mistake to allow young colts to "look out for themselves." They should be fed plentifully, as they need more food when growing than a mature animal. What obtains with man, under similar circumstances, applies to the brute creation. A growing boy will eat more, and often, than a man, because nature demands to be supplied with food to cause growth. Look to it that your colts are not neglected. We advise farmers to pay more attention to this in the future.

The agricultural statistics of Ireland show that the country has been losing, especially in regular farming. But 1, 678,125 acres were given to cereals, against 1,756,737 acres in 1882. The flax average fell from 113,484 to 95, 935, and even meadows and clover show a decline of 31,051 acres compared with 1882. Horses declined, and pigs are 1, 351,990, compared with 1,430,128 in 1882. Poultry decreased from 13,990, 096 in 1882 to 13,368,329 in 1883.

Experiments have proved that musty meal is not wholesome food for any of the domestic animals. Disease and death have been directly traced to its use. When fed to poultry, chicken cholera, or some disease resembling it, was the result. Cows, to which it was fed, gave bitter milk, and ceased to thrive as well as those in the same pasty which had no grain. Swine fed upon it failed to grow or fatten. Only hogs were not injured by it, and they escaped because they would not eat it.

Shade should always have plenty of shade in the pasture. They like, when they have eaten enough, to lie down in a cool shade and take their comfort, and if they can do so they will thrive much better. A few shade trees for this purpose will pay for any drain upon the soil. If there are no trees, it will pay to erect a cheap shed, even though it be but a rude structure of four posts set in the ground and a roof covered with brush wood or pine limbs. It should be open to the south always, and may be open on all sides if more convenient. The effect of a shade tree on a cow's back when lying down seems to be more marked than while she is feeding, and cannot fail to make the animal feverish, and thus injure both the flavor of the milk and its keeping qualities.

Shall we Prune in Autumn.

To the above question, which comes from several subscribers, we say, decidedly, yes, provided the question be applied to new planted trees, those set last spring or within a few years would otherwise be our best citizens. The man who owes a just debt feels to the man who owes to promise to pay at a certain time. The rust takes his wheat, the drought reduces the yield of corn and cotton; he contracted debts with the expectation of a full crop. He fails to keep faith with creditors, they become dissatisfied and exacting, and the poor farmer thus burdened, is humiliated by the fact that he is unable to meet his obligations with his follow-men. He becomes dissatisfied with himself, out of humor with his creditor, sour with his wife, and cross with his children, and unless he has a full share of moral courage, he is on the road to a life of dependence and serfdom, enslaving his wife and children when all might be made happy and independent by a due regard to economical expenditure. A young man starting out in life should avoid debt as he would avoid a venomous reptile. It will enslave your body, destroy your peace of mind, degrade your morals, your wife, your children, and bring a reproach upon the mother that bore you. It will weaken your influence as a neighbor and make you less useful as a citizen; it will tax your very air you breathe, your wife, your children, the clothes you wear, the food you eat. It will tax your health, and the medicine that is administered to your disease. It lies a tax upon the chair that supports you at your own table and upon the bed on which you languish and die, and will leave your home, your wife, your children, burdened with taxes that you have been under the sod. Young men keep out of debt.

There is nothing fraught with such damaging results to farmers as buying on credit. It encourages extravagance frequently destroys confidence and lowers moral worth in men who would otherwise be our best citizens. The man who owes a just debt feels to the man who owes to promise to pay at a certain time. The rust takes his wheat, the drought reduces the yield of corn and cotton; he contracted debts with the expectation of a full crop. He fails to keep faith with creditors, they become dissatisfied and exacting, and the poor farmer thus burdened, is humiliated by the fact that he is unable to meet his obligations with his follow-men. He becomes dissatisfied with himself, out of humor with his creditor, sour with his wife, and cross with his children, and unless he has a full share of moral courage, he is on the road to a life of dependence and serfdom, enslaving his wife and children when all might be made happy and independent by a due
