Agriculture.

Live Stock Notes. The live stock on a farm need special care in winter, and fortunately it is a season when the farmer has plenty of time to attend to this duty.

Professor D. D. Slade, of Harvard University, instructs farmers how to construct stalls, as follows:— It is rare, even in these days of progress, to see a well-arranged stall in a farmer's barn.

The Purpose of Manure. In a state of nature all rich soils are covered with some form of vegetation. Grasses form the natural coat of the prairies, while the mountains and coast borders are clad with forests.

Life in the Lumber Regions. An American agricultural paper, has the following on life in the lumber camp:— Excepting that of the sailor, probably no other occupation so strongly impresses itself upon those who follow it as that of lumberman.

Stock Farms. Some progressive farmers in Pictou County, N. S., are moving to establish a stock farm there. A correspondent has ably dealt with the subject, in the columns of the Pictou News, which paper gives the project its warm support.
