you'd oughter have a first class meetin. I'll be there if possible," said my neighbor. Now, said I, we have done good pioneer and surveying work. We have shewed that agricultural education pays in other countries, and as far as possible that it will pay in these provinces. We have been educating sentiment in favor of agricultural education, that sentiment will result in the introduction of primary text-books on agriculture, and a course of agricultural reading books. This will necessitate normal teaching on this subject. I do not know such word as fail, but suppose we do not get the College and Farm that we have worked and spent to chtaincan it le fairly said that cue ..... money has been wasted? Suppose again, that our governments borrow money, buy a farm, equip it with college and farm buildings, stock and all the essentials for instruction in agriculture-all that has been done and spent will have been wasted, as far as this crowning enterprise is concerned, if there are no students to be instructed. We believe, however, that our farmers and their sons realise the inestimable advantages to be derived from a course of instruction and training at an Agricultural College and Model Farm, and that as soon as the institution is ready for students, students galore will be ready for it. Then, said I, we have discussed the "commercial relations of the Order, and have made further arrangements for getting the balance of stock sub-This branch will market our produce and supply our wants in quantity to
