The Sunbury Election.

Mr. Arthur Glasier, the Government can- only without loss, but at a positive gain. didate in Sunbury, as we anticipated, has been re-elected. Mr. Morrow made a plucky fight, and polled three hundred and sixtyfive unpurchased votes, while Mr. Glasier's it be as large in the future, as during 1884 ? majority, we have no hesitation in saying, The spirit of the farmers of the Province, was procured by the most flagrant corruption. The Government were bound to win at any cost. They recognized in the contest, an important issue, and money was profitable investment to the farmers, but also lavishly expended to carry the constituency. a source of pecuniary gain to the Govern- Africa. All the party hacks were called into requisi- ment. tion; the bribery brigade were out in full force; Government contractors and officials, exerted their influence for Mr. Glasier, and the Attorney General personally solicited votes for the successful candidate. Before various reasons. In the first place, it was such odds as these, a more popular man than Sir Richard Cartwright's old constituency. Mr. Morrow would have been compelled to succumb; such a torrent of corruption would by it in 1867; it re-elected him in 1872, and have borne down any man in the County. tion of Finance Minister in the McKenzie town the previous evening. That Mr. Morrow polled such a large vote, is Government. In the general election of him are considered. department. The Monteur says :- "Those who are tion for permanent license, but credit will be given them for their knowledge of French." By this regulation, every French student teacher, it matters not what his education may be, will be debarred from receiving first or second class license, and must accept a third class, unless he knew English enough to enter the English Department. Why this harsh and unjust discrimination? Why should a student teacher, possessed of an excellent education and correct knowledge of the very language required in the schools, be forced to accept a third class license, while his fellow-student, with a poorer general education, perhaps is awarded a first or second class? During the last five years, one Acadian student entered the English department for every nine or ten who graduated from the French Preparatory Department. The effect of this regulation then, will be to crowd the service with third class teachers, many of whom will be unjustly deprived of first or second classes. On general grounds, such a step cannot be accounted for. Will the Department explain its motive? Is this another device for robbing teachers, or is the intention to oblige French student teachers to abandon the study of the French language, to the injury of their schools and people? We ask for no favours, but fair play for these people. Let their student teachers' fitness be tested in the ordinary way, with due regard to the work they are to perform, and the schools in which they will labour. Let no arbitrary anomalous, and altogether unjust and unreasonable rule be enacted, which deprives their teachers of their rights, and from him again on colonization, or any other constantly this winter, and they look forward their schools of much of their just means of practical subject.

SCISSORED SELECTIONS.

[Pall Mall Gazette.]

A Clock in a Bustle,

An amusing story reaches us from Paris. On Friday last, a lady, having poid her hotel bill, sent away her boxes on a cab, and sallied forth on foot. No sooner had she departed than the landlord discovered that the clock had disapaeared from the mantelpiece of the room which his late lodger had been occupy-Rests on her cheek; he licks her shell- ing, though he remembered to have seen it there subsequent to her trunks being despatched. Convinced that she must be the thief, he rushed out in hot pursuit, and overtaking her, he charged her with the robbery, and gave her into custody, the lady meanwhile protesting loudly against the indignity offered her, and vowing vengeance against the traducer. She was, however, taken before the Judge d'Instruction, to whom she resumed her torrent of indignant denial with the extraordinary volubility peculiar to the daughtets of Gaul. Her indignation was at its height when lo! 12 o'clock rang forth in clear ones from the region of Madame's dress improver. The expression of consternation depicted upon the fair pilferer's countenance, together with the appositeness of the quaint phenomenon, were too much for the gravity of the officials, who burst into a fit of uncontrollable laughter. Five minutes later, a female warder returned the telltlale timepiece

French Journalism.

What the Parisans are willing to call

A recent writer on French journalism says that in that profession the national vanity is displayed more strongly than anywhere else. He says a Frenchman would infinitely rather starve and be called a journalist than live in clover and be a railway porter. Any one, he says, can be a journalist in France if he has $200 or so to lay out. Talking of the French newspapers, he says :- Wretchedly printed to clear them, and also afford the on bad paper, with few or no literary expenwas the response. I have known when wo foreign telegrams in the Daily News, for astance, have cost more than the whole proluction of Le Temps for the day, which is one of the leading Paris papers. When one ooks at the thousands of trumpery sheets that are issued under the name of newpapers in France and the inanities that distinguish them, the wonder is how they can possibly manage to exist. But while many of them die in their infancy the majority eke out a
