We were not aware, that because a man happens to have been born in any particular grade of society, it should be made a canvass against him in an election campaign. The electors of York are not interested in the occupation or employment of either Mr. man's Son. Hazens or Mr. Wetmore's father. They will be quite content to take both gentlemen as they find them. Moral and intellectual worth is the true standard of nobility in this country, and Mr Hazen and Mr. Wetmore may reason ably lay claim to a fair proportion both these admirable qualities. Al Mr. Hazen has accomplished, is the result of his own unaided effort, and Mr. Wetmore's good reputation as a lawyer of ability, and as a man of generous in stincts, may be credited alone to Mr. Wetmore.

These estates he cleared in many cases of weak or defaulting tenants (a painful process, and not without risk or loss of life,) and sold at a great profit. Latterly he bought large tracts of real estate in Western America for ranche purposes, and refused a quarter of a million for one just before his death.
