In his progress through the house he had snatched up a lamp, and it now glimmered feebly through the large room, casting deep shadows on the stern face of the outraged father, as he paced to and fro, impatiently awaiting the appearance of Ernest Arden.

Hunter sat near a table, watching his companion, and marvelling if the sad work of this night would result in the acknowledgment of his cousin as Leon Ashley's wife. To her it imported little now, but to her child's future it was of vital importance that the legality of her parents union should be admitted, and a competent provision made for her support.

All hopes from Ashley himself were ended by the expose of this night, but the pride of the grandfather would surely induce him to save the helpless infant from dependence on strangers. The door opened, and Ernest Arden with eyes kindling with excitement, features pallid from repressed emotion, came quietly into the room, and closed the door behind him. He abrubtly said :

"I am here at your bidding, Judge Ashley; but what can be done without the presence of you son ? what has become of

"I know not, neither do I care," was the stern response. "From this night he is no son of mine, I disown him; I cast him off utterly as a disgrace to my name.
