Fredericton's Future.

As citizens of Fredericton, we ar commencing to have strong faith in th future prosperity of our beautiful little city. You don't hear people going around exclaiming now, that Fredericton was finished years ago, and ought to be fenced in, and whitewashed. We had reputation here a few years ago of want of enterprise. Strangers said we had a very pretty little city, but that was all there was to it. The people lacked push, and yigor, and enterprise, our friends from outside were wont to say, and there was, we fear, too much truth in it. But things have changed very greatly changed, say within the past six years. True, there has been no great boom, but what is better, there has been steady, substantial progress in every branch of business. Our city itself has gone for ward rapidly. A new system of water works, new side walks, improved business houses, elegant private and public buildings and a score of other changes have marked the growth of Fredericton within a decade. But we are on the eve of greater increase in all that goes to make up a city's success. New lines of railway, opening up and developing fertile tracts of country, are about completed, or in process of construction. We are acquiring communication with new markets, and new trade centres. shall shortly be placed on the line of di rect travel with every important point in Canada and the United States, by means of railways that must bring us increased business, and the growth that follows. The citizen of Fredericton, who would despair of his city's future, ought to move out and give place to better men. There is no room for grumblers here there is plenty of opportunity for thrift, and industry, and these coupled with the advantages about to be opened to us, ought to assure to Fredericton, a wide extension of her borders, and an upbuilding in the next quarter of a century, that will astonish the prophets o evil, who have predicted her decease, Let us be hopeful, earnest in every effort for the benefit of our city, quick to take advantage of everything that offers assistance, and with our central situation, our facilities of easy communication, the development of new tracts of country around us, and our own pluck and perseverance, we shall be able to place our fair little city among the most enterprising, and the most prosperous communities in Canada, as it is now among the most beautiful, and the most intellectual.

No Hope for Secessionists.

The Nova Scotia secessionists cannot take much comfort out of the recent statement in Parliament, of Earl Stanhope, Colonial Secretary, who said that, "Her Majesty's government have no power to alter the terms of the British North American Act, 1867, which was settled with the assistance of delegates from Nova Scotia, and was subsequently approved by the legislature of that province. I may add that I have every confidence, that the Dominion Parliament will desire to redress as far as possible, any reasonable grievances of which a Province may complain.'
