Agriculture. Horses for the British Army. Col. Ravenhill, who, with two other officers of the Imperial Army, have been visiting Canada for the purpose of reporting upon the horse producing capabilities of this country.

Drying off Cows. Ninety percent of the spoiled udders are destroyed by bad management in the drying off process. When they are milked so little milk that it is not deemed advisable to milk regularly to save it, they are pretty apt to be neglected and to go so long between milkings as to induce inflammation.

Securing Handy Swine. Those who have bred and fed the finer kinds of swine can hardly be expected to take a step backward, parting with any portion of the shapeliness to which they have been accustomed.

The Farmer's Poultry Raising Guide. This is the title of a new and valuable book on poultry raising for profit. This book answers in advance every possible question in respect to keeping and caring for poultry, and gives in the plainest possible manner all needed instructions to enable beginners or old hands to carry on a business successfully, and make money.

Keeping Onions through the Winter Months. Different methods are recommended for keeping onions through the winter, one of which, allowing the bulbs to freeze, may be a safe method, but on some accounts is not to be desired.

How can we make the Farm Pay? To the thoughtful farmer this is the question of the hour, and one of vital importance. The past year has been one of exceedingly low prices for all farm products, and it has been only by the most careful management that farmers have held their own.

Does Farming Pay? If a merchant in the city is able to earn a competence of $1000 to $2500 a year he is considered wealthy by most farmers; yet this entire sum is oftentimes expended in providing the ordinary comforts of living; and at the end of the year he is in proportionately poorer than when he began.

There are too many farmers who fail to inform themselves of what is going on in the agricultural world. Too many why do not realize what stupendous changes have taken place, what facts have been elicited, what discoveries have been made, what great approaches toward making agriculture an exact science.

FARM NOTES. Give the cow this winter warmed water if you can. The poultry product in America is $245,000,000 a year. Corn, taking a series of years together, is far more certain than wheat.

ALL SORTS. REST IN DEATH. Death, men say, is like a sea that engulfs mortality. Tragic, dreadful, blindingly full of storm and terror. Death is like the deep, warm sand, filling the heart and covering up with tender hand the wave's drifted error.

Save all worthless heads of cabbage and the waste leaves for the cows. They will appreciate and eat them greedily, and materially increase their flow of milk as a result of the extra feed.

The best of roots for the horse in the winter is the carrot. Enough should be provided to give two or three messes a week. To buy them they are generally sold by the bush, but may be grown for much less cost.

Good blood is appreciated more and more each year by those who purchase horses for city purposes. The farmer who has the best bred animals to sell generally fares the best—a good thing to think about as breeding time approaches.

Wherever there exists a faulty or careless system of drainage, no correct estimate of the agricultural value of a property can possibly be formed; for although from its excessive dampness a soil may remain unproductive, it may, nevertheless, contain all the necessary elements of fertility.

Corn is the bane of the farm horse, as it is also of the horse doing any kind of work. The horse does not seem to be sufficiently nutritious, but because it makes too much fat and not enough muscle. The horse's muscle wears away under exercise, but its disappearance in no wise lessens the power for either draft or speed.

Turkeys are readily fattened on thick boiled cornmeal and oatmeal mixed with chopped stub. The turkeys should be kept in closed coops, the steam, burning no stub. The cut should be pared smooth and painted with red lead and oil, which will prevent decay of the wood. The bark will then heal and gradually cover the wound, and no sprouts will start from the cut, as they will if it is made otherwise.

There are many reasons why orchards, even of the hardiest trees, should not be planted on bleak, exposed hill sides. Every year, before the fruit has time to ripen, it is blown off by fierce winds. Only the apples in valleys or other sheltered places hold on until regularly gathered.

An Aronstock farmer has been feeding damaged starch to hogs with good results. It was wet up with scalding water and mixed with meal. The hogs fed upon the mixture had no rapid gain. Raw potatoes fed to hogs or stock of any kind are not considered rich food, yet well ripened potatoes contain some fifteen or sixteen per cent of starch.

The demand is for yellow meat. No matter how choice the chickens, or how dressed they may be, if pale in color, or rather, if not a bright yellow they go into the second class. In selecting breeding stock for next year bear this in mind, and while securing size and shape, be sure that the birds have yellow legs and skin. Especially should care be taken in selecting the cock, for here is half the flock.

New Postal Law—of Interest to Farmers. The new law preventing the sending of small quantities of fluids by mail is of wide value to the people at large. It is in no way a restriction to the farmer, which, while it centralizes the manufacture in the best possible form, brings its results to every man's door, at the lowest possible price. This the tendency of modern trade is everywhere to bring the manufacturer or producer and the consumer practically face to face.
