The "Organ" and the Irishmen.

To the Editor of the Farmer: SIR .- If you will take a friend's advice, you will not trouble yourself about showing up our little tri-weekly's hostility against Irishman. Facts, sir, speak louder than words, and when it disclaims any such bigotry, and suddenly turns rounds to champion the next week. Irishmen against insult, your best argument is a good hearty laugh. You may depend upon it, that so long as this little engine's Chief J head light sees no election in front of it, the Circuit court this week. policy of the papar will be as in the past, to crowd down the Irish, and kick them when they are down; but they'll always hear the Siren's song to lull them to sleep when somebody wants to get hold of them, or in plain legiate School. See advt. language wants to get hold of their votes. You understand me, Mr. Editor. I don't find in St. Paul's church Sunday fault with you for taking a few out of many examples, to show the narrow-minded hatred of this organ to the Irish, but, as old friend Fleming of the College used to say "it's a a work of supererogation." We have seen it over and over again; we know where it comes from, and we expect to meet it there.
