RECIPROCITY.

The Montreal Gazette remarks that although Sir John Macdonald's state ment in his speech at Victoria that while Canada is ready to conclude a reciproc ity of trade treaty with the United States she will not solicit overtures to that end on bended knee, is not new it has the force and freshness of novel truth. Looking back for a scor of years there is really nothing in the retrospect to warrant the opinion that a any period the Americans were prepared to meet us in a fair and friendly spirit. For a time after the civil war our neigh bors harbored feelings of resentment if not of positive bitterness towards Canadians because of the belief that Englishmen had extended sympathy to the South in that unfortunate struggle, and they declined with brusqueness to ever seriously consider the renewal of the then expiring reciprocity treaty. Twelve years ago, after a lapse of time deeme the issue of the double assignments, sufficient to salve the wounded feelings 166; total 356. of Americans, the Canadian Government commissioned Hon. George Brown to proceed to Washington for the purpose of opening negotiations for a new treaty Mr. Brown succeeded to the extent of drawing up an instrument, but upon its submission to the Senate at Washington it was rejected without even the courtesy of serious consideration. After that, the Canadian Government could not with out loss of self-respect play the part of the mendicant and humbly beg the United States to grant free intercourse of trade. What was done tended rather to confirm our neighbors in the attitude they had assumed. Our markets were left open to the manufacturers of the United States, goods from that country were dumped into Canada, and virtually there
