FARM NOTES. There is no excuse for farmers having scrub stock. Never let a horse eat or drink much when he is hot from work.

The Marshes of Westmorland County. The following correspondence in reference to the marshes of Westmorland County, appeared in a late number of the Maine Farmer, and will be read with interest by many of our readers.

Lawyers, doctors, merchants, clergymen, etc., take papers devoted to their vocation. Farmers should do the same.

Always keep your hens supplied with fresh water. During the coming months the dishes should be filled twice a day.

Partians and Arabs prepare their horses for hard drives by fasting rather than feasting. More horses are injured by hard driving on a full stomach than by any other process.

Hay will soon be in order and must claim attention of the farmer. With so much to be done in a short time other work must, of necessity, be laid aside for the time, and the chief energy be given to haying.

Scabby legs will gradually appear from chickens as the season advances. One of the best remedies is grease of any kind. Mix one teaspoonful of kerosene with a teaspoon of lard and apply to the legs twice a week for a month, and it will cause the scales to disappear.

The sparrow is becoming a prime favorite with farmers in Ogdensburg, N. Y. There, this season, the army-negro has been a most alarming extent until the sparrow set itself up as the worm's enemy.

Horse Breeding in Canada. The following extracts from the report of the British agents of the Dominion Government are of special interest to those persons who are concerned in promoting the horse trade between Canada and England.

In reference to army remounts the High Commissioner in London says that the horses imported from Canada for army purposes seem to have given satisfaction, and there appeared every reason to hope that a large and growing business had been inaugurated for Canadian breeders.

Mr. John Dyke of Liverpool, writes: "No phase of British agriculture has received more attention during the past year than that of horse-raising, more especially that of horses suitable for the army remounts and hunting."

Another correspondent writes: "The parent of the little white maggot is the striped cucumber bug. Prevent the laying of the eggs and you will keep the maggots."

When to Cut Hay. The farmers seem to think that it is all very well for men to write about hay with the bloom on and an odor of violets, but when it comes to feeding the old cow he wants to see her chew on something that will keep her busy and will last a while.

Medicinal Value of Fruits. The Western Herald has taken French Occasion to allude to the healthfulness of a fruit diet, but in doing so it has not intended to lay down a rule that would work in every case.

White specks in butter are caused by particles of the caseine of the milk getting mixed with the cream. If the milk stands too long before the cream rises, or if the cream rises too slowly, these particles are in the cream, and they thus become incorporated with the butter.

The hens that break their eggs are usually those which are fed with kitchen waste. Feeding with meat or animal flesh seems to cause this bad habit. Once it is contracted there seems to be no cure.

There are not many kinds, but they are destructive and the little striped bug is difficult to manage. I follow, says a correspondent of the New England Farmer, the general custom of laying shingles on the ground among the vines, and early in the morning when the bugs are under the shingles, they have taken shelter for the night. I clap the different shingles together, the bugs between them, and I don't know what to do with them. Hand picking is a disagreeable job and busy farmers have not much time for it.
