PEOPLE WHO READ AND REFLECT, after reading upon the many published testimonials regarding North & Lyman's Vegetable, Disinfectant and Sceptic Cure, can scarcely fail to perceive that the evidence so positive and concurrent could not be added in behalf of a remedy of doubtful efficacy. The facts proven by such evidence are that it cures out all impurities of the blood, restores digestion, enriches the circulation, and regulates the bowels and liver.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Question ably debated in the House of Assembly

On the Resolution and Amendment

Moved by Messrs. Stockton and Wilson.

A Full Summary of the Speeches.

The Proposition Voted Down.

In the House of Assembly, Wednesday night, when the woman suffrage question came up for discussion on the resolution and amendment moved respectively by Dr. Stockton of St. John, and Mr. Wilson of York, the galleries were packed with spectators, the audience including very many ladies. The debate was most ably conducted on both sides, but the most eloquent address of the debate, was of course that delivered by Hon. Mr. Blair, who took strong ground against enfranchising women.

A very complete summary of the leading speeches on the subject is given below:—

DR. STOCKTON OF ST. JOHN

moved the resolution qualifying all widows and spinsters holding real estate to the value of $100, of personal and real property to the value of $400, or who should be assessed upon income to the amount of $400, the right to vote for members of the Assembly. He opened his remarks by reminding the House that the franchise of the vote had been in the hands of the men since the time of the Revolution, and that the principle of the franchise had been established by the men of that day when the franchise bill came before the House, would imperil the bill, he had withdrawn it with the understanding that the House would have an early opportunity of pronouncing upon it. It had been represented by some that he should have pressed that resolution at the time, quite irrespective of the consequences, but he (Stockton) had felt that great credit was due to the government for the wise, liberal and comprehensive measure they had introduced, and he had felt that it would be unfair to the government to hamper their action. He quite agreed with the proposition heretofore laid down by the Attorney General, that the franchise of the country should be behind, rather than in advance of public opinion. If he thought that the principles embodied in the resolution he had just moved were in advance of public sentiment, he would hesitate to advocate its adoption. He believed, however, that so far from being in advance of public sentiment the resolution was

RATHER BEHIND IT.

It was important, he said, that the electorate of the country should have a full and fair representation in the legislation of the country. The time was, in the history of this province, when the qualification for voting for members of this House was a very high one, and when that was the case there was not a representation of public opinion, but the reverse of it. The classes and not the masses of the country were represented on the floors of the Assembly when that inequality existed. For years past, there had been an enlargement of the electorate, and both as to the members of this house and as to the men who should have the right to vote for them; and to-day the principle had been established by the House, that every young man of the age of 21 years should have the right to vote. Formerly property was the qualification for the vote, and the right to vote had been conferred upon those who were three or four times as intelligent and as well educated as the masses of the people. The qualification for the vote was not intelligence, but property. It was not the man who voted but the property. If the man was a non-resident, he voted simply upon the fact that he was possessed of $100 of real estate in the electoral district of which he was a voter. Supposing he transferred it to a woman, would the transfer be made had he still the right to vote? No. The right to vote then ceased hence it was property that constituted that right. If property then why should not it have the right to vote whether it was held by a female or a male? To deny this right was an injustice to the property, if property had the right to be represented further; but the resolution saying that intelligence, under certain circumstances, should have the right to vote—that any licensed teacher or professor employed in any school or college within an electoral district if registered, should vote. He had conferred that provision to licensed teachers and those employed in universities and schools for obvious reasons. The education of the country was under the control of the government of the country. The legislature had been for years past, and would be for years to come, the most intelligent of the country quite irrespective of sex. Whenever any person wished to teach in the province, he or she had to give a certificate of character as to intelligence from the government. That certificate certainly went to the extent of saying that intelligence, under certain circumstances, should have the right to vote—that any licensed teacher or professor employed in any school or college within an electoral district if registered, should vote.
