Jeremiah Foley, the defendant, testified that plaintiff was hired by him in September or October, and that he agreed with him for $5 per month, and he was to get his washing and mending ; he remained till about April. Defendant did not remember giving plaintiff any money beyond $1 or $2; he said he had received money from several parties.

His Honor then charged the jury to the effect that the matter was one of contradictory evidence and told them they must allow such reasonable sum as they thought proper. The man was disabled by the loss of an arm, but the defendant admitted he had done his work in a satisfactory manner. They might calculate the wages from July or October, and deduct the $13. 50 credited from the amount they allowed. The jury retired and afterwards brought

DOMINION PARLIAMENT.

On Thursday last, on the third reading of the bill amending the Public Works Act, Mr. Mitchell moved an amemdment that claims for damage on the Intercolonial railway should be settled by courts of law. Mr. Mackenzie said that the law afforded ample means for so doing. In the bill to amend the Post-Office Act an amendment was accepted that instead of opening suspected mail matter it should be stamped "suspicious."

On Friday Mr. Chas. Burpee presented petitions from the ladies of different towns, among which, was that of Mrs Mc-Curdy and other ladies of Chatham, praying that the bill to amend and extend to the whole Dominion, the Temperance Act of 1864, may become law.

On Saturday the discussion of Northwest Homestead Act was continued, the exemption being reduced from $4,000 to $2,000.
