It may be, however, that some injudicious and overanxious friend has laid himself open to the operation of the law, and, indeed, it would be strange if it should turn out not to be so. But the people who have been interested in election matters with us know that the result of the late contest was one brought about by as free and unbiased an exercise of the ballot as ever was had, and that the motives of those who seek to question it cannot be engendered by a desire for the public good. These persons know that their candidate was beaten on his merits, but they are determined that the gentleman elected by the people shall not be allowed to serve them. Simcoe Saunders created a vacancy which it was very proper to fill by the appointment made, Mr. Robinson having represented York in the popular branch of the Legislature. We believe there were aspirants to the position who had never shown, by an appeal to the eople that they could be elected and the Government did well not to make the mistake of appointing them, as such selections are generally unfortunate. We have an example in point in this County.
