A Treasure Claim.

Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over a kerosene lamp at Chicago some ten years ago and caused the great conflagration by which that city was almost destroyed. A Jolicure cow as enterprising, through less vicious, tumbled into a hole a year or two ago and caused a discovery which has made a stir, in the County of Westmorland at least, ever since. So important had the matter become that the erudite editor of the Chignecto Post sent a reporter a few days since to interview a gentleman interested, but the latter declined to say very much on the subject, save in regard to some past operations. The pith of the interview was as follows :-

Mr. G.: "You, of course, know the discovery of the extraordinary place was by a cow breaking through the material covering the hole. Attention was directed to it, the earth was shovelled off to the depth of six or seven feet, when they reached a platform of timber in the centre of which was a stick of timber standing vertically, with a large flat stone placed on the top. On removing the platform was found marsh mud filling an oval hole over 16 feet long, and 6 feet wide. This was excavated down for about 25 feet. the marsh mud and leaves excavated with which the hole was filled, was found an old plate which, however, was broken in being taken out. The walls of the hole were cemented and hard as stone, and when near the bottom there were plain the games rapidly decreased after an hour, marks of picks on the hole. A stone care fully squared was found in the centre of the hole near the bottom. Having reached this distance the bottom was hard, made apparently with red clay and cement; passing through this, quick-sand was twelve P. M., or three hours and three found, and water become troublesome. From further indications which were observed and which I do not care to divulge, the working in the hole was suspended, and a shaft was sunk on the southerly side of the hole, for about 30 feet. At about a draw. 20 feet from the surface a gallery filled with marsh mud, chalk and rounded pehbles was struck, running from the di rection of the first hole, dipping southerly obout 45 degrees. This is the extent of our operations. Work has been suspended until next season. Reporter: "What led you to dig the

Mr. G.: "I have declined telling you. I may however, mention that singular as it may appear, several mineral rods which have been brought there by parties not interested, have all, within a circle of 2 miles, pointed in the direction of this mysterious hole. When near the hole the rods dip into the earth. When at the bottom of the hole they pointed upwards, and in the direction of the side

Reporter : "Do you really believe the virtue of these mineral rods? Mr. G: "No! I cannot say I do, but the remarkable manner in which they behave in this locality, is, to say the least, most extraordinary, and quite sufficient to confirm the belief of those who have faith in them.

Reporter: "I hear the mineral rods have had something to do with your explorations. Mr. G: "I can hardly say that, but most certainly they have confirmed the indications to which I have referred, and given several of the parties interested

Mr. G .: "In the first place, there has always been current among the French for a great many years a tradition that treasure was concealed at some point equadistant from Port Beausejour, and the port at the Gaspereaux. That when the French occupied the country, a French Man-of-War brought a large sum of money to be used to abordeau the Tantramar and No One rivers, and to dig a canal across the isthmus uniting these forts and giving water communication between them. have confidence in having struck the locality so spoken of, and in the next place, the extraordinary care which evidently had been taken in sinking this mysterious shaft and securing the walls and filling up the marsh mud brought from a distance. and the concealed horizontal gallery in ROBINSON'S Emulsion, Fowler's Pile and Hu- like manner filled with marsh mud. proves that some good strong reason must have

Mr. G: "We doubt if that law is force in the Dominion, but if it is we do not think Her Majesty will interfere. " Reporter : "The country has been great ly amused at your operations. " Mr. G: "We are perfectly satisfied they should be so. I know that several of those who have been loudest in their jeering, are successful in obtaining interest in our undertaking." Russia to Adopt Responsible Govern political rights appear to promise good results within a short time, although the commencement of reform, has probably been retarded by the murderous policy of the Nilhists, which has reflected disgrace on the cause of those engaged in the emancipation of Russia from its despotic form of Government. The London Standard has published the following forecast of prospects of reform:-"At present nobaly can say what the outcome of the forthcoming Council will be. One version of the question to be debated is whether the present system of absolutism shall be continued, or whether reforms shall be intro duced, but the question is framed thus only to soothe the outer world. The real question is whether Russia wishes for peace or war, and it is expected she will decide for the former, as his recent tour has convinced the Czarewitch of the neces sity of observing the Berlin Treaty, and the Prince has hitherto been the Chancellor's trustiest friend. Should the Prince's conviction be overborne. Prince Gortschakoff and his disciples who are now in office will, it is affirmed by these prophets, be dismissed, the Czar will abdicate if he does not accept the necessity | it for the bridal veil. of giving up absolutism, and the Czarewitch then as Czar will introduce reforms, of which the following is an outline:-Universal suffrage. A Legislature to be created, consisting of two houses, the lower house elected by the peasants and the upper house composed of nobles nominated by the Emperor; Asiatic Russiathat is, the Caucasus, Siberia and Central Asia-not to participate in the representative system, but to form a Vicerovalty under the rule of the Grand Duke Michael. now the Governor of the Cancasus; the press to have a more independent position, although its entire freedom will not be granted; the independence of the judges, presence of her elders of equal rank .who are not to be removable by the She lost her father just a twelvemonth government; Provincial Diets to be charged | ago. with the duty of administering the affairs

Wonderful Chess Playing.

In the parlors of the Manhattan Chess Club, New York on Thursday evening last, there was an unusually interesting exhibition of skill, which attracted a number of chess players in addition to the members. Captain George H. Mackenzie engaged nineteen players at once. The intention was to have twenty games made, but the twentieth man was not found bold enough to enter the lists. The tables were set in a hollow square, in the centre of which the champion took his position. On the out side were seated Messrs. Stamper, Ward, Bledom, Gedalia, Nye and other well known players, who ventured the trial against one-nineteenth of the Captain's powers. The openings were made rapidly in the usual way, and the interest of the games was speedily developed. The Captain moved rapidly from board to board. evidently taking the position of each game as a separate problem each time he returned to it. Whether he thus studied a series of problems, or whether he kept the nineteen games in his head as games, the rapidity of his play was equally marvellous, In almost every case a glance was enough, and frequently when his opponent having anticipated his move, made the next at once, the Captain as he moved away from the board made the next movement with out an instant's pause. The number of the most of them being won by Captain Mackenzie. Mr, Gedalia and Mr. Nye won, but the others went down one by one. The last game was finished at a quarter to quarters time. Captain Mackenzie won fifteen out of the nineteen games, Mr. Nye and Mr. Gedalia each winning one and

His Majesty Don Alfonso XII., King of Spain, who is just twenty-two years old, having been born on Nov. 28. 1857, has now taken a second wife; his first being his cousin, Maria de las Mercedes, youngest daughter of the Duke de Montpensier and of the Duchess de Montpensier, who is sister to the ex-Queen Isabella II. of Spain. The young King began to reign in January, 1875, and was married, three years later, to his cousin, Princess Mercedes, who died June 26, 1878 having been only six months Queen.

The new Queen is an Austrian Princess, the Archduchess Maria Christina, youngest child of the Archduke Earl

Ferdinand, cousin to the Emperor

Francis Joseph I., King of Hungary;

her mother being the Archduchess

Elizabeth, another member of the

Hapsburg-Lorraine Imperial family. She was born on July 21, 1858, and has been educated under the watchful care of her mother, to whom she is deeply attached. She is as well acquainted with four foreign languages as with her own; she draws and paints, mostly flowers, and is an excellent pianist. In Gmunden, where the family of the Archduchess regularly passed the summer, the Archduchess occupied herself with wood-carving, under the tuition of a clever artist. Every year she forwarded a number of warm garments, made by herself, to the poor children of Gmunden. The Archduchess is much attached to her former teachers and governesses, and is full of kind attention and regard for her attendants. Immediately on the arrival of a former instructor on a visit, the Archduchess will herself place footstools and cushions for her visitor's existed for the making of these marvellous | comfort, and numerous are the occasions when the Archduchess has been seen plodding her way down the steep wooden steps in Gmunden to visit one of her former governesses. She yields without any contradiction to any wish expressed by her teachers, be it ever so difficult, and rejoices like a child when praised. She is perfectly free in her political views, not in the least moved by outside influences, and never conceals her most decided antipathies. The young Archduchess was devotedly attached to her uncle, the Archduke Francis Charles (the Emperor's father), The struggles of the Russian people for and whenever he announced his coming from Ischl to Gmunden to dine with the Archduchess and her mother the day was sure to be kept as a festival. The kind-hearted Archduke never neglected any occasion of giving his dear 'Christa' pleasure. When, two years ago (the last summer of his life), the young Archduchess was hard at work collecting stamps for a poor young lady in Munich, who wished to win a splendid Borsendorfer piano by collecting a million of stamps, in return for which an English gentleman offered to give this piano, her uncle Francis Charles forwarded stamps to further his darling's wish. The young Archduchess, when seventeen years of age, shed many tears when she was informed that the "Emperor" had select ed her to be the Abbess of the Ladies' Convent at Prague. It took a long time to convince and persuade her that she had not to take the veil and go into the cloister, but that this was simply a place of high honour and income, and that she could at any moment exchange

The Archduchess Christina is very girlish looking, and appears younger than she is. Her hair is flaxen, her complexion very blonde, without ruddiness, her figure very slender, her and her stature below the middle height, though her photographs represent her as being tall. Whenever the bride-elect speaks to any one the Archduchness Elizabeth remains at some distance to put her forward. The future Queen is shy, but has amiable manners, and a smile that pleases. Her attitude is deeply respectful in the
