The Moore Centennial, (From the Freeman.) A large and respectable audience assem

to celebrate the Moore Centennial. The Mayor presided, and on the platform were Hon. Senator Dever, Hon. Judge Watters, Lieut.-Col. Macshane, Messrs. Elder, M. P. P., Willis, M. P. P., Ritchie, M.P.P., F. McCafferty, John Guthrie, I. Allen Jack, John Anderson, Francis Collins, John W. Nicholson, T. W. Anglin, Dr. Travers, etc. The Cornet Band, which has attained a remarkable degree of efficiency under the leadership of Mr. Dixon, played a melange of Irish melodies very pleasingly, and when this was concluded, His Worship the Mayor opened the pro- Cetewayo is elated with his success, and ceeding with a few apt remarks on the patrictism and the poetical genius and the filial devotion of Moore, who, by his abilities, made his way into the society of the noble and the great, and was the peer of the greatest of them all, whose poetry is the property of all mankind, and whom Englishmen and Scotchmen, as well as Irishmen, are proud to honor. Mrs. Landry then read a centennial poem to Moore, and was heartily applauded. Mrs. Perley, Miss Guthrie and Messrs. An audience like the one before him ould be felt, understand and appreciate the feelings that find such utterance and respect in others, what they cherished in their own breasts. In the history of poetry there are poets and poems in which the ruling ideas of their time and nature appear in all truth and power. After considering poetry in its relation to nature as an intuition of the Infinite, a perception of God in creation, the speaker proceeded to show that the work of the poet, no matter how great he may be, is not to be considered the exclusive product of the individual, for it must bear on it the stamp of his education, of the people among whom he dwells, and of the age in which he lives. A telegram from Maritzberg of May 14th, says: There is exciting news from the Tugela frontier. Near Helpmakaar, on the 11th May, a great battle took place at a point between Thringpost and Santwalls. A powerful Zulu chief, named Matcona, with all his people, numbering some thousands had resolved to surrender to the British. He was joined by Dabalmanzi, Cetowayo's brother, who commanded the Zulus at Ginghiloo, and the remnant of that army, its chiefs having kept away from Cetywayo since their defeat through fear. When nearing Tringpost they were unexpectedly intercepted by a powerful force, supposed to be commanded by Cetewayo, coming from the northward. A fearful conflict ensued, resulting in great slaughter of the Zulus, who wished to surrender, and they were dispersed and driven back. Matcona escaped, and it is reported Dabalmanzı was killed. King apparently learning that Lord Chelmsford's columns have made a forward movement, has summoned all his followers and taken a strong position at the fork of the White Umvelosi at its junction with the Black Umvelosi. At his back are some of the highest known mountains of Zululand, densely wooded at their base. The country in front is swampy. Here the King evidently awaits the British. The native scouts state he has declared that he will never surrender. He is believed to

The bridge across the Tugela is now available for light transport. Col. Pearson, who has been suffering from fever, is much better. Sickness from sunstroke prevails. The Boers in the Transvaal are quieting down.

The only way to cure catarrh is by the use of a cleansing and healing lotion, applied to the inflamed and diseased meinbrane. Snuffs and fumigators, while affording temporary relief, irritate the affected parts and excite a more extended inflamation. Besides, no outward applications alone can cure catarrh. The disease originates in a vitiated state of the blood, and a thorough alterative course of treatment is necessary to remove it from the system Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy has long been Irish heart - a sentiment that deepens with | known as an efficient standard remedy for the progress of education and enlighten- this disease, but, to insure a radical and permanent cure, it should be used in conjunction with Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical parte truly said Europe would never know | Discovery, the best vegetable alterative
