daughter, on condition that the prophet should promise perpetuity to his line-thus the line of David. Hence the School of the prophets of Tara. As for the "stone of Destiny," Kings had been crowned on it for over 2,000 years, and if it was a dead dull thing, it had a mighty voice. From Heremon a King of the Irish Federation, and through the Scottish Kings, the sceptre had descended to our present Queen. The lecturer here read an article from an American paper adverting to the growing power of England (who would soon be mistress of Southern Asia) under Beaconsfield in consequence of his policy both in regard to European and Asiatic affairs. The English had, indeed, lost one colony, that of the United States, but even this had been intimated by prophecy. In conclusion Mr. Miller said he had endeavored only to give an outline of this subject, but he hoped it would encourage us in the study of the Bible, and in extending missionary enterprise. The Rev. Dr. Jardine said he had much pleasure in tendering a vote of

There were, however, important points that deserved their attention, and one of these was the difference between Judah and Israel, which was mentioned by Jeremiah, Isaiah and Ezethis description, but the British? kiel. Some of the prophecies concerning The lecturer after adverting to the history | Israel presented remarkable coincidences, and the lecturer had asserted that Judah was represented by the modern Jews. There was a good deal clear, but the question was, notwithstanding the prophetical coincidences, did profane history support the theory? But history had so Turner and others for investigations far failed on this point. Mr. Miller had urged that the Anglo Saxons had their origin in Media, where Isaael had been carried captive, and that they afterwards came west as far as Macedon and the north of Syria, and it was into these regions that Christ sent his apostles. probably be seriously involved, and be marks that race did not belong to Media, obliged to acquire Palestine and Alexandria, but the Israelites had given up genealogy and so might go from Cyprus to Jerusalem. and thus lost their identity.
