A Reply to "One of Them."

To the Editor of the Miramichi Advance. DEAR SIR :- I was rather surprised last week to see that "One of them" replied to my letter through the columns of the ADVANCE. Considering the hard things that "One of Them" has been in the habit of purpose. The only money that was voted Governor. was for the purpose of building a school He proceeded with a detailed statement on a site approved of by the meeting held of all the circumstances in connection with on the 30th Jan. The Trustees forgetting this master, and argued that the Lieut. this and in direct opposition to the ma- Governor deserved the censure of the jority at the meeting moved the school to House.

Further, he has publicly asked a rate-Inspector Ramsay, and the same "One of Them " also publicly said he intended to defray the cost of moving the school, but One of Them" and even three of them will find that the money ought to have ment. been voted for that purpose before it is assessed for. We have read that "Those whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad," and the conduct of these gentlemen is truly a spectacle for the gods. To read the effort of "One of Them' we should think that the present Board of Trustees are the most peaceful and loving individuals existing. But the illusion is dispelled among those who know even two of them, for harmony cannot reign where they dwell. "One of Them" alludes to the tearing of a flag. This is an unfortucredit of "One of Them" that while labouring under an attack of frenzy when the news came to his ears that the "late lamented" was defeated, he tore a flag. Let "One of Them," two of them and three of them understand that I will give no factious opposition, nor will I be sneak enough to run from house to house teiling trumped up stories. If they do wrong I will give them a chance to defend their wrong doing. And "One of Them" can again preach what is furthest from the thoughts of three of them, -peace. Since my last letter I do not hear of certain parties getting the contract for repairing the school until money is voted, or until each and every ratepayer has a chance to compete for the job. If you will oblige me by publishing this Mr. Editor, you will

Can "One of Them" deny Mr. McCarthy in seconding the motion dwelt on the importance of the case and justified the proposed interference of Parpayer of this district to write to the Chief liament with it. He took up the circum-Superintendent, and inform him how he stances connected with the dismissal and

Mr. Mackenzie congratulated the Government on their courage in putting up a gentleman on the back bench instead of moving themselves. If Letellier had acted unconstitutionally the Government should dismiss him and submit their reasons therefor to Parliament. His Government did not see any grounds for dismissal, believing that Letellier had acted within his constitutional powers. We had no right to pronounce on the wisdom of the act. The Governor found ministers to take the responsibility for nate allusion for him. It is not to the his act and the country sustained them. He did not dissolve the House of his own volition but by the advice of his ministers, who were there for the purpose of sitting in judgment on the Lt. Governor. Parliament had tried the case once, and was a man to be on trial twice? Sir John did allege last year that Letellier should be dismissed. He had been in office four months without dismissing him and now he was trying to get a vote of the House on which to base some ulterior action. It had been well said by the seconder of the motion that the people should rule, and the people had decided this case. The proof of it was the fact that the Jolly Government still lived. The argument that supplies were voted for patriotic reasons was fallacious. The action proposed here now was unparliamentary and dangerous. Where were we to stop? Whenever a majority of parliament were opposed to any one of the Lieut. Governor's he would be condemned. This was an attack on the autonomy
