Miramichi Advance. TORONTO, July 23. This morning Bennett expiated on the scaffold the fatal act which led to the death of the Hon. George Brown. He slept quietly last night, and this morning declined to take any refreshment. He was closeted with Fathers Eagan and Sheehan from an early hour, and at 7.45 the governor of the jail, Sheriff Jarvis and the hangman came to his cell. The hangman at once pinioned his arms, and in doing so drew the straps very tight. Bennett said: "You hurt me; is it requisite to draw the straps so tight?" "Yes," said the hangman; "it will be better for you." "All right; go on," said the prisoner. The strapping was then

These men frequently tell the truth as to the size and quantity of the fish in their ponds, and, in comparison with the men who breed horses are conspicuously truthful. Neither do fishing implements necessarily enlarge the imagination and pervert the moral sense When fishing for perch or catfish, the longer a man fishes the duller and the more truthful does he become. The man who habitually spends hours every day in angling from a punt in a mill-pond, where perch and cat-fish are said to exist, gradually becomes a monument of stupidity, and could no more invent a brilliant lie than he could row a race in his wretched boat. Must we then conclude that it is the trout stream which leads men into the ways of

It must be noted that the further the trout fisher goes from home the larger are his lies. For example, the man who goes from this city to fish in Long Island or the size of his largest trout to two pounds and a half. If he goes to the Adirondack Maine he catches nothing smaller than six-pounders, and if he goes to the Nipigon region, he boasts of trout of eight or ten pounds' weight. In any case it may be assumed that he never really catches a fish that weighs more than four ounces but just in proportion as his distance from home increases, his alledged trout grow in size. In fact there have been a few men who have gone as far as Oregon in search of trout, whose friends have subsequently been compelled to kill them, because of their injudicious boasting of thirty-pound trout-which are an affront to human in-talsehood? This certainly seems improbable, for if there is anything that looks par-wrong. Veracity pertains to civilization, and the more civilized a man becomes the more-other things being equal-will be

The troutfisher is truthful so long as he wears the garments of civilization in the city; but law providing for the death penalty, but when he throws these aside and puts on flannel shirts and unblacked boots, he book it should be respected. In the case clothes himself with lies as with a garof Bennett, who was hanged yesterday at ment. The Maine trout-fisher, who, in addition to flannel shirts, smears his face with grease, like an Abyssinian, under the pretext of keeping mosquitoes at a distance, becomes a savage of the rudest variety, and, in consequence, completely loses his acquired habits of veracity. This is probably the real reason why trout-fishing and falsehood are so closely connected, was one brought on by Mr. Brown's own and in the absence of any better theory. it may be adopted as a satisfactory answer tention of another who comes into his office and draws upon him a pistol?
