The Naked Truth.

Beautiful Truth, once in the days of yore, Put on the brave array, Which then the goddess's of Hellas wore And issued to the day, Robed in such sort with graces so divine, That man, adoring, built to her a shrine. The Gods, indignant at the sight, Rose in defence of their invaded right "Horror and infamy" -- they cried,
"And Profanation!" and they came and went,
Pacing the ambrosial Courts from side to side, Till a wild tumult filled the firmament. Jove, to appease their fury, left the skies And quickly stood before The shrine of Truth, determined to chastise The sacrilege: he tore From her the regal mantle which she wore.

And stripped the robe away, And flung to falsehood's hand Mantle and robe to serve for her array; And gave to truth this terrible command-Be thou forever naked ! from this day." And therefore, reader let not truth be blamed If evermore, since then, She hides in corners, humbled and ashamed ception of stock, observe the following requisites :- Fowls require pure air, and plenty of it at all times; therefore, see that the hen houses are always clean and well ventilated. They should have fresh, clean water daily, and never be allowed to go thirsty. Feed them regularly two or three times a day, all they can eat up clean. Don't crowd your fowls in their quarters, give them as much room as possible to move about, and sufficient roosting accommodation. Subscribe for and read a poultry journal, follow out the advice and experience given in it by older breeders, and you cannot fail to succeed. There is very little, if any, hard work attached to it. It needs attention, however, and a share of good common sense, coupled with ordinary judgment in the manipulation, to produce and raise good fowls. You must be patient and satisfied to reap your reward after the work is done, the same as at any other business. Do not be in haste to buy from the first man that you know has stock to sell. Ascertain who has good stock of the variety you intend to keep, pay a fair price for it, and you will be satisfied with the result. Begin aright, and continue to give the work a fair share daily of the necessary supervision that you would give to any other business from which you would of the discovery of a monstrosity in the poorhouse of that State, known as "the turtle-man." The correspondent says he visited the poorhouse to satisfy himself as to the truth of the numerous stories he requirements. A little labor with but a had heard regarding this creature. The keeper of the institution introduced him to the monstrosity, calling the four feet high dwarf, who stood before him, by the name of Samuel Keene. He says :-Keene, at the command of the keeper, managed, by a singular side movement of old premises, great care should be taken the body and pushing his slouch hat from to avoid damp floors or quarters. To his head by his queer shaped claws, to make a courtesy. As he stood before us, bareheaded, he presented the most wonderful specimen of man amalgamated with the animal kingdom that can be imagined On speaking with him he apparently understood every word, but lacked sufficient intelligence to frame a reasonable answer, just as a dumb brute can comprehend but being smooth, may present no impediment cannot give an intelligent reply. In stature this singular being is short, thick set, and flat rather than round.
