mightily put out about carrying an umbrella more serviceable than ornamental; whereas, I, being married, satisfy myself with what I have. To be a philosopher, you must get married; and who knows but what that same umbrella may come in service then ?"

I escaped from him then, as I had reached the street I wanted to get out at; and leaving the omnibus, I elevated the umbrella to protect me from a pouring rain. At the corner, under a shop awning, stood two lovely damsels, evidently waiting for the rain to cease, for they were without umbrellas.

Over-sensitive in regard to my appearance, I could not help noticing the titter as they regarded me. And, to tell the truth, there was somewhat of a contrast to laugh at. Imagine a fashionably-dressed young man, rather good-looking, decidedly genteel, and over his head an enormous old cotton umbrella, and you'll see me as those girls saw me then.

I was nettled, put out, and wrathful, but resolved to check their mirth at all hazards. Stepping up to them, I said, "Ladies, my umbrella is large, and as I see you are without one, can I offer you my services as far as I go?" mentally resolving, that if they went further than I, my umbrella should go too. After whispering for a moment, one of them replied, "Thank you sir; we would be obliged for your escort." Of course, as we went along I did my best to open a conversation, and soon had the pleasure of eliciting a few words from them. They were both very pretty; but the one called Mary, I thought then, was a particularly pleasant young lady, and instinctively desired to prolong our walk, that we might be better acquainted.

Having reached the street in which I dwelt, I turned to Miss Mary, and said "I live in this street, and as I see you are going further, you are welcome to the use of the umbrella, for it is but a step to my residence. You can return it at your leisure. Good day."

And leaving them with the umbrella, which I knew they would never return, for I purposely did not give them my address, I ran home, congratulated myself at having so pleasantly disposed of my pest.

Somehow or other, Mary's eyes were always in my mind, and I should almost have forgotten about the old umbrella, if it were not for the remembrance of her sweet face. After a while I came to the conclusion that I had actually fallen in love with Mary, but who was Mary, and where to find her, I did not know. And then I began to wish I had given my address, and then the umbrella might be returned to me.

All this took place in March. Months passed, and I never came across either Mary or the umbrella. How I wished for a glimpse of either I cannot beneath it; which, of course, I did, only EYE GLASSES, tell you; but I did-awful! wishing that Graham was in my place,

Well, things were in this state for some weeks, and at last I thought that the time had come when I would know "Yes, but being as you are you are my destiny from her lips; so telling Wyndham I was going away for a stroll to take a few sketches-a thing I knew he abominated-I just walked off to Mr. Graham's house-that was Mary's father-hoping to meet her alone.

Taking a shady wood path which led up to the rear of the house, I stalked along for some distance, thinking of what I was about to do, when happening to glance up I noticed on the rocks of the shore my inevitable cotton umbrella expanded in all its glory.

That umbrella haunted me then, and presaged evil from its appearance; but, nevertheless, I went toward it, thinking, of course, that the wind and tide had driven it ashore, which they had, but not just there.

There it lay wide open, its top toward me; and when I reached it, I seized it by the projection of the stick, and lifted it toward me.

By Jove! when I think of the result always wonder how I got through it at all; for, as I lifted the umbrella, what was behind and under it was revealed; and there, comfortably seated on the rock, was my Mary and a good-looking young fellow. If I was astounded, they were about as much surprised. Mary blushed, and looked at me as if to reproach me for such an ungentlemanly action; while the young fellow looked as if he were about to eat me up, and muttered, "What do you mean, sir?" "I beg pardon, Miss Graham," I stammered. "By seeing this umbrella, to which I have a slight claim, and not noticing its occupation by any one, of course, I thought I was recovering a STAMP. In English or German. lost article of my own."

"Oh, then," said Miss Mary, "you are the gentleman who lent us the umbrella so kindly some months ago in London? Harry, this is Jane's and my escort. Don't you remember !

This familiarity may have been pleasing to Harry, but it by no means followed that it was to me; so I remarked, as coldly as possible, "Miss Graham, I again beg your pardon for the interruption; and as the umbrella is pleasant for your use, allow me the pleasure of transferring the ownership to you."

"Gentlemen," she said, "allow me to introduce you to each other. Mr. Thornton, this is my cousin, Mr. Harry Graham, brother to the young lady who was with me that day. Harry, Mr. Thornton, the gentleman who saved my life the other day." Did she not "accent" cousin pretty strongly? I thought she did, at least it made me take heart and act more pleasantly; and in five minutes I had the pleasure of finding that though the young lady was on the freest terms with Graham, it was only on account of the relationship between them. To explain my appearance, I gave the same excuse as I had to Wyndham, and was forthwith put to work to make a sketch of the umbrella, and with them

A Gentle Hint.

In our style of climate, with its sudden changes of temperature-rain, wind and sunshine often intermingled in a single day, -it is no wonder that our children, riends and relatives are so frequently taken from us by neglected colds, half the deaths resulting directly from this cause. A bottle of Boschee's German Syrup kept about your home for immediate use will prevent serious sickness, a large doctor's "Wyndham," shouted I, "you pick | bill, and perhaps death, by the use of three instead was an old dilapidated-looking up the others, and I'll look after this or four doses. For curing Consumption, Hemorrhages, Pneumonia, Severe Coughs Croup, or any disease of the Throat or Lungs, its success is simply wonderful, as your druggist will tell you. German Syrup is now sold by Dr. Pallen, Chatham, E. Lee Street, Newcastle, and by all first class druggists in every town and village on this continent. plicity together with greater durability and entire reliability for all the requirements of the field, than any other Mower extant. - In construction they are similar to the celebrated Walter A. Wood's Iron Frame Mower, and the Richardson Buckeye, both American Machines. Of the former there are over 200,000 in use, and the extraordinary number of 20,000 were manufactured and sold last season, by the Wood Company of United States. We have over 500 of our manufacture now in use, every one of which (no exceptions) stands as a monument of All kinds of job work in the above lines promptthe grand and unprecedented success of home manufacture and our enterprise. A list of our ALEX. ROBINSON, Agents in this section of the Province will be found appended, and farmers are requested to ask information of them relative to our Mowers in use in their respective localities, which will establish beyond doubt their anquestionable superiority over any other mower to be had in our market. The facility of procuring all parts or pieces with-in a nominal length of time must show beyond the shadow of a doubt the claims such an enterprise has upon the farmers of the Maritime Provinces. For the coming harvest of 1877 we will manufacture LARGLY in excess of our numbers of last season, and trust that our grow ing enterprise may find such inducements held out to it as will be commensurate with its merits. Let it be remembered we have no hesitation at all times, in entering into a friendly competition in the field with any other machine in our market.
