These hon. gentlemen, with our exception, supported the Government through every division on this tariff, an now after a year's trial of a tar ff. tha they themselves assisted to force on the country, what do we find ? Why, hon members from that Province taking stand far beyond that of hon, member from New Brunswick. We find them coming before this Parliament asking to a money compensation for the damag done by the tariff to their Island. We in New Brunswick, do not ask for a money consideration. What we ask is that w shall be relieved from the burden. We do not offer to sell our rights for a mess of pottage. But they go further, and they use words which would be denounced as treason if coming from our side of the House. They say if this money consider . tion is not granted, they will not be ac countable for P. E. Island taking mean to secede from the Umon. Does the hom the Finance Minister want any stronge appeal to show that his tariff does not bear with equal justice ? Can we in th face of these appeals from his own friends say that his tariff bears equally ?

The hon, the Finance Minister told u last year, and he tells us again this year that this tariff is not intended, and doe not add increased taxation on the peop of this country. But he has also told u that

 A Mistakan Policy.

Some of the speakers at the meeting of the Chatham Temperance Reform Society on Tuesday evening, complained that many persons of position and influence in the community had not, in their estimation, given the countenance and aid to the organization, that it deserved. The Society, we think cannot justly complain on that score. It was countenanced and loyally aided, so far as other claims upon their time and support would permit, by persons of position and influence. When its founder was publicly proved to be an unworthy man, a few leading members insisted on the Society shouldering his disgrace by attempting to whitewash his character. This attempt was not

To us, thou wert e'en yet more near, A living household word thy name. Thy native land - thy friends - thy home:

Could'st thou forget those earlier ties ? The early, happy dreams of life. Which then were thine? before the strife Of broken heart-throbs yet were rife. To sear thy life and dim thine eves.

Well for thee if thou could'st forget ! Life's bitter dead sea fruit so fair The heart's rare hopes so little worth-For they are not of mortal birth, Whose reams of perfect lives on earth. Are ever more than things of air.

Yet Heaven's richest gifts were thine, Genius that no fate could hide : Success thy every effort sign'd, And ere thou hadst their worth divin'd, The laurel leaves thy brow entwined, And crowned thee at the morning-tide.

Thy proud, bright fame a world has sung. Thy pure, brave life was known to few I now the bright eternal day, For thee has dawned. And He, thy stay, With loving hands has clear'd away, The shadows that thy life-path knew.

Another land thy labors claim'd, Beneath its skies thy last farewell Was breathed, by the All-wise decree, But whereso'er thy works may be, In hearts and homes made bright by thee, There, thrice blessed, thy memory, A living cherished thing will dwell. BEATRICE MCGOWAN.
