Lady Florence Levison.

AN EPISODE OF THE ZULU WAR.

"Doctor—doctor"!

"Yes, dear Lady Florence, I am here. Hush—hush; let me beg of you to be calm."

As he spoke, old Dr. Ferrers approached the bedside, and pressed the hand of the young girl, who lay sobbing and moaning in the darkened room.

He felt his hand clasped convulsively.

"Do not refuse me, doctor," she cried, half-imperatively, half-coaxingly; "do not refuse me. Just one glance—just one moment. It is all I ask."

"You must not think of it to-day—indeed you must not. Let me beg of you to compose yourself, or the consequences——"

"Consequences? What can be worse than my own fears? Nothing—nothing. Reality must fall short of what I dread. Doctor—doctor!—the looking glass—just for one moment—only one moment!"

"My dear Lady Florence," said the doctor, with a break and tremble in the professional voice, for again his patient burst out into a tempest of sobs and tears, "you think it cruel of me, no doubt, and yet if I could, I would gladly do what you ask. Remember, I have known you all your life, and you have never once found me cruel, except when to be so was to be kind."

"Yes—yes, doctor, I know. But oh! that awful night! you can never, never understand the horror of it! I was awakened with a frightful sense of suffocation—then I found my room was full of smoke—a moment after I knew the house was in flames. I was saved, it is true; but would it not have been more merciful if I had perished? Think what I have suffered!"

"Hush—hush. I——."

"Can you imagine what I have suffered since?" she moaned, not so wildly as before, but her voice was full of agony. "You know, of course, what the physical pain has been; and yet that is nothing—nothing, when compared with my mental torture! Oh! Howard—Howard!"

"Yes—yes," said Dr. Ferrers, quickly, "as soon as you were calm enough I meant to speak to you of him."

"Speak now—at once! Let me know the worst!"

"See how unnecessarily you excite yourself," he said, gently. Let me beg of you not to torment yourself with anticipations of evil. There is no use. The Cape mail is in, and brings intelligence that Howard Templemore has safely landed with his regiment."

Another burst of tears followed this announcement; but they were tears which relieved the overcharged heart of the poor girl, for when she spoke again her voice had lost all its wildness.

"You are not deceiving me, doctor?"

"Indeed I am not."

"Thank Heaven!"

Dr. Ferrers echoed the prayer, and coming a step nearer, looked down pityingly into the countenance of his suffering patient.

"Doctor," she said, "I am calm now. But when I think of Howard, can you wonder that my fortitude gives way? I know—I feel certain—that even if I recover, my face will be horribly disfigured—perhaps beyond all recognition. Was it not cruel in the extreme, that within one month of our wedding day, Howard should be summoned on active service to the Cape? I bore up as bravely as I could; and then that dreadful fire—"

"Your cross has indeed been a heavy one, Lady Florence; but do not forget to be thankful that your life has been spared."

"But can I be thankful? Would not death itself be preferable to the terrible existence which I must look forward to? Can I doubt that when Howard returns, if he should be spared to do so, that his love for me will be changed into aversion as soon as he sees my disfigured features. Oh, what can be the pain of death compared with that dreadful moment?—for I love him so—oh! how I love him!"

Some minutes elapsed before the doctor could command his emotions sufficiently to speak.

"Lady Florence," he said, "you must listen to me—indeed you must. Bad as I admit the case is—seriously ill as you are—you must not give way to despair. Time and careful treatment will do wonders. Attend to my instructions—above all, try to preserve your calmness as much as possible, and I can give you hope."

Lady Florence did not reply. The opiate which had been administered some time previously was beginning to exert its effects. But though she lay there so silently, yet how poignant were her thoughts! with what an agonizing pang she remembered her lover as she saw him last! How her heart sank as she recollected, when once on one of their walks they had encountered a woman with a scarred and hideous vissage, and how, with an exclamation of disgust, Howard had turned away. So too — oh dreadful thought — might she not expect that he would turn from her!

A long quivering sigh followed, and then all was still.

A few minutes later, Dr. Ferrers stole quietly from the room, leaving his patient in a profound slumber.

Accustomed as he was to scenes of woe, the worthy doctor was deeply affected, and he hurried down the broad staircase, hoping to quit the house unquestioned.

But on the first landing a door opened, and he found himself face to face with the Earl of Croxden.

"The Lady Florence—my daughter—do not keep me in suspense—how is she?" was the agitated inquiry.

"I think, my Lord," replied Dr. Ferrers, huskily, "that so far as existence is concerned your daughter is quite safe; but unfortunately, she is so severely burned about the head and face, that her features will be deeply scarred for life."

The Earl groaned and covered his face with his hands.

"Above all things" continued the doctor, "take the greatest care that she is not allowed to catch even a glimpse of herself in a looking-glass. I have had hard work myself to turn a deaf ear to her piteous entreaties. But no matter how painful it would be, you must be firm, for so terrible now is the appearance of the burns, that if by any chance she sees the reflection of her own features, I would not be answerable for either her reason of her life."

"My Flo! my beautiful Flo!" exclaimed the Earl, in a heartbroken voice, for this only daughter of his was passing fair—a queen among beautiful women; and it was a bitter pang for him to know that the marvelous beauty of which he had been so proud was wrecked and lost forever.

He could say no more, for his emotions overmastered him.

In the face of such a terrible calamity as this, Dr. Ferrers felt that all commonplace expression of sympathy would be out of place; so with a simple "good morning, my lord," he left the house.

* * * * *

Six months afterwards, Lady Florence Levison was sitting alone in her own room, in the family mansion in Eccleshall Square. A tear-stained letter lay spread open on her knee; but though her eyes were fixed upon it, her thoughts were far away.

Was she sorrowing for the loss of her wondrous beauty? Who could doubt it, unavailing though she knew her grief to be? She knew full well that beauty is a passport of priceless worth. Had she never been so gifted she could have borne her accident with fortitude and patience, but to be so hideously transformed was hard indeed.

It was Howard Templemore's last letter which lay open on her knee. She had heard from her lover at irregular intervals up to the date of the battle of Ulundi. Until then he was untouched by wound or sickness. But with the news of the decisive victory came also the intelligence that he was dangerously wounded. She, in her replies, had shrunk frem acquainting him with the full extent of the calamity which had overtaken her.

The letter on which her eyes were fixed told her that Howard, having recovered from his hurts, was invalided home, and might be expected to arrive within a day or two.

But, alas! with what terrible feelings did Lady Florence look forward to this meeting! She dreaded now the coming of the hour when he should be restored to her; for then, then—she felt her earthly happiness would be over.

"No, no," she said mentally, even were he willing, in the goodness and generosity of his heart, to fulfil his engagement, and make me his wife, I love him too truly and too well to consent to so tremendous a sacrifice I will see him—for the lest time—I will tell him all, and then everything shall be at an end between us!"

As she dwelt upon and strengthened herself in this resolution, she grew calmer; and when, some little time afterwards, a servant announced that Captain Templemore awaited her in the drawing-room, all traces of tears had disappeared, her countenance expressed her resolution, her determination was firmly fixed.

Completely shrouding her features by a thick Shetland veil, which she wrapped closely over her head and face, she descended without hesitation to the drawing-room. On the threshold she paused; but recovering her composure by a supreme effort, passed in.

The afternoon sun was shining fiercely without; but the Venetian blinds were down, and to her great relief she found the apartment plunged in semi-obscurity.

Then her brain whirled, and she lost sight of surrounding objects. But almost immediately she became conscious that the tones of a well-known voice were falling upon her ear.

It was Howard's voice! But where was he?—why had he not sprung forward to greet her? She felt sick and faint, and leant heavily upon a chair.

"Lady Florence," she heard Howard saying, in an agitated voice, while he stood near a couch from which he had just risen, "I have come here to perform a very hard and painful task. I shrink from it—I feel that I have scarcely enough courage for what I have to say. While my strength serves me, let me nerve myself to tell you that, owing to a deplorable and irremediable accident, I feel compelled to ask you to allow me to withdraw from my engagement, as I feel it will be impossible for us ever to be united."

The worst had come, then, though she was scarcely prepared for it in this shape. A sob almost like a groan escaped her lips; but, unheeding it Howard Templemore went on, as though what he had to say was of so painful a character, that if it was to be uttered it must be said quickly or not at all.

"Lady Florence," he continued, "You have heard—of course—you know, that I have been badly wounded—that I have almost recovered. A bullet passed through my head—yes through my head. Marvellous to tell; the injury was not fatal; but, when I recovered—I had not strength of mind to write and tell you so—although my life was spared, the injury had deprived me of my sight. Yes—yes, I am blind. Never again, save mentally, shall I be able to see my darling's face! Florence—I—I——"

Lady Florence listened like one in a dream. Could it be true? she asked herself. Howard sightless—unable to see the havoc the fire had wrought! That, then, was the reason he had made no attempt to cross the room. In an instant she was at his side—her arm around him. But as she forced him to sit down, he felt her tears falling in a shower upon his face.

"Don't pity me, Flo!" he cried in great distress, "don't pity me, I cannot bear it! Flo, Flo, you unman me quite! I have come here to perform a duty, and I will do it, let it cost me what it will. We must part, dear one. Hopelessly blind as I am—for one possessed of rank, riches, and beauty as you are, it would be a crime on my part to permit you to hold yourself to your engagement. Florence, darling, you cannot tell what anguish it costs me to speak the words, but, Florence—you are free!"

"Hush—hush," she answered in a choking voice, as she pressed her lover's head against her breast, "hush—hush, dear one—I am yours, Howard—only yours—for ever!"

He tried to release himself—to speak but a kiss arrested the word upon his lips; and then clasping him still more closely, she went on quickly:—

"Listen, Howard, listen; and when you have heard me out, if you still desire that our engagement shall be cancelled, I will consent, you shall be free. Last summer, as you are aware, I went on my long promised visit to Deighton Court. One night, soon after my arrival the old house was discovered to be on fire, and in spite of all efforts made to save it, was burned to the ground. By a miracle I escaped with my life; but oh! Howard, so badly burned about the face and neck, that I am an object to shudder at, not to see. Instead of being beautiful, as you have so often told me I was, I am now hideous to look upon—seamed—scarred!"

"Good Heavens! my darling, what a cruel fate!"

"Cruel indeed, for it made me dread the hour of your return; fearing that, when you saw me, you would shrink from me!"

"You forget I loved you!"

The words were simple, but full of tender pathos.

"Then tell me, Howard—do you still wish to cancel your engagement?"

"Can you ask me? or rather, can I expect that you will be willing to link your lot with one who must be a constant care and burthen to you?"

"Ah! yes, or you know little of a woman's heart. You are now, Howard, suffering—needing help—a thousand times more dear to me! And to guard you—shield you—comfort you—is a prospect of so much happiness; that—but I forgot—my face——

"I cannot see it now, dear one—I shall never see it more, was the deeply touching answer: "but I can remember it as I saw it last, and so it will always look to me. Dear Florence, if you feel you can give up the whole of your life to the care of one who cannot be other than a continual burden, I will ask you, not to break off our engagement, but to be my wife!"

"And can you doubt my answer? I will be your wife, Howard—yours, and yours only. I had looked forward to a miserable existence, secluded from all who knew me, uncheered by one single gleam of hope. Now the prospect seems too bright—my happiness too complete?"

And so these two most loving hearts—so terribly afflicted—found in each other mutual strength and consolation.

Those who visited the delightful watering place of L——during the past season will not fail to have had their attention attracted by a distinguished looking pair, who would be seen every morning either strolling on the beach or seated on the pier.

The lady, richly but plainly dressed, invariably keeps her face covered with a thick black veil, which makes a glimpse even of her features impossible.

The erect bearing of her companion denotes his military training, although he limps slightly in his gait. One hand is passed under the lady's arm the other holds a cane. His eyes are wide open, looking ever forward, yet seeing nothing but the blackness of total blindness.

And these are Captain and Lady Templemore. To them the world is nothing—to each other they are all in all.

Vennor on Coming Weather.

Vennor, the Canadian weather prophet, writes to the Montreal Witness: "December having seen the intense cold anticipated by me over a large portion of the Dominion, I am encouraged to attempt a step or two farther, and from the same stand point in my theory from which my forecast was made, it seems pretty certain that we shall have to record at least two more terms of severity during the present winter, and it is an interesting problem to determine when each of these may be expected to occur. To determine, if possible, this point, I have carefully studied my charts of our winters as far back as the winter of 1860-1861, and have arrived at the following 'probabilities,' viz.: That the next marked severe term is likely to occur between the 9th and 15th days of January, or very close upon these dates. This will be severe and probably equal if not exceed the December cold term. The third 'dip,' which I think will be the severest of the three, is likely to come upon us in proximity to the 8th of February and continue for three or more days. Two other 'dips' of minor importance wil probably be located towards the end of February and close to the 17th day of March respectively. Between these very cold periods there are likely to occur two or more generous thaws, probably with rains."

A curious incident happened during a fishing excursion of three men from Cumberland, Md., on the South Branch. A string of fish was fastened in the water at the edge of the river. When the fishermen came to take the fish they found that a fine bass had been added to the string. On examination they found that the big bass had swallowed one of the smaller ones on the string and then could not get away, falling a victim to his greediness.

DR. CHANNING'S
Sarsaparilla
FOR THE BLOOD.

A HIGHLY CONCENTRATED EXTRACT OF
RED JAMAICA SARSAPARILLA
AND THE DOUBLE IODIDES.

Space forbids the giving more testimony in this place, in favor of this great medicine. Is not one certificate, however, from an eminent and well-known Physician like Dr. Bessey, of Montreal, sufficient to establish its superiority over the numerous mixtures called Blood Purifiers offered by Druggists and others?
T. G. STRATTON, Esq.
Montreal, Feb. 1st, 1877.
I cannot but regard the formula from which Dr. Channing's Sarsaparilla is prepared, as one of the best possible combinations to constitute an effectual remedy, for the cure of Blood Impurities. So far as my experience leads me with this remedy, I can testify to its great value in the treatment of all Strumous and Cachectic affections, as Glanular Enlargements, and a wide range of skin affections; as a reliable preparation for general use as a blood purifier, I know of none equal to it, combining as it does, all the imputed virtues of Sarsaparilla, and several other valuable remedies, with the extraordinary alterative properties of the "Double Iodides," and of none that can be more highly recommended as safe, certain and reliable, and I have every confidence that such a remedy for general use, taking the place of the many worthless nostrums of the day, will be a great boon to suffering humanity, and its use will be attended with the most satisfactory results. It should be invaluable to persons beyond the reach of medical advice, and will, no doubt, become popular with Medical men throughout the country.
Respectfully yours,
W. E. BESSEY, M D
Beaver Hall Square.

NOTE.—Dr. Channing's Sarsaparilla is put up in large bottles, with the name blown in the Glass, and retails at $1.00 per bottle, or Six Bottles for Five Dollars. Sold by Druggists generally, and most Country Stores. Be sure, and ask for Dr Channing's Sarsaparilla and take no other. If not readily obtained in your locality, address the General Agent.

CARTER'S SARSAPARILLA
The Great Blood Purifier.
A genuine fluid extract of Red or Jamaica Sarsaparilla, combined with Iodide of Potassuim, for the cure of all diseases arising from impurity of the blood.
Nearly all the diseases that trouble the human race are influenced by the state of he blood. It is indispensable that this fountain of life be in a pure and healthy condition.
As a purifier of the Blood, a Renovator of the system, and preserver of the power of life, Carter's sarsaparilla has no equal.

TO THE
FARMERS OF MIRAMICHI.
We have been Manufacturing
IRON FRAME MOWERS
For the last four years, and are now offering to the farming community this, the BEST MOWER,
combining greater excellence of mechanical simplicity together with greater durability and entire reliability for all the requirements of the field, than any other Mower extant.—In construction they are similar to the celebrated Walter A. Wood's Iron Frame Mower, and the Richardson Buckeye, both American Machines. Of the former there are over 200,000 in use, and the extraordinary number of 20,000 were manufactured and sold last season, by the Wood Company of United States. We have over 500 of our manufacture now in use, every one of which (no exceptions) stands as a monument of the grand and unprecedented success of home manufacture and our enterprise. A list of our Agents in this section of the Province will be found appended, and farmers are requested to ask information of them relative to our Mowers in use in their respective localities, which will establish beyond doubt their unquestionable superiority over any other mower to be had in our market.
The facility of procuring all parts or pieces within a nominal length of time must show beyond the shadow of a doubt the claims such an enterprise has upon the farmers of the Maritime Provinces.
For the coming harvest of 1877 we will manufacture LARGELY in excess of our numbers of last season, and trust that our growing enterprise may find such inducements held out to it as will be commensurate with its merits.
Let it be remembered we have no hesitation at all times, in entering into a friendly competition in the field with any other machine in our market. WE GUARANTEE OUR MOWERS TO BE IN EVERY RESPECT SUPERIOR TO NONE. Farmers would do well to enquire prices and terms before purchasing elsewhere.

AGENTS:
Campbellton—MALCOM PATTERSON.
Dalhousie—DAVID RITCHIE.
Bathurst—CHARLES ROSS.
Newcastle—STEPHEN Y. MITCHELL.
