Rowdyism:-On Tuesday last about half a dozen specimen roughs belonging to Chatham and Newcastle, joined in a spree in Chatham. They attracted quite a large crowd on adjacent wharves by taking to the water in the public slip where they indulged in disgusting antics and bad language for half an hour, and then left in a boat for the other side of the river. One of the party jumped overboard when the boat was about 200 yards from the wharves, but was hauled on board again by his companions. The Advocate says it was reported in Newcastle that one of the young men was drowned. This however was incorrect. It is probable that a more

In saying this we do not wish to discourage our Active Militia men, but simply to correct an abuse that is too often indulged in, both here and elsewhere, in rural districts, where men are permitted by their officers to wear all kinds of clothing mixed up with an article or two prescribed in the Queen's Regulations or by General Orders. No commanding officer who knows his duty and properly regards discipline will permit his men to appear half uniformed, as by so doing he brings ridicule upon a service that is of great importance to the country and deserves the encouragement of all good citizens.

The 12th of July

There was a demonstration by Orangemen at Fredericton on 12th inst. Of the St. John representation the Globe said One hundred and fifteen Orangemen formed in procession order on Germain street at 7.15 o'clock on Monday, and led by the 62nd Bast. Band, marched through Germain, Princess, Charlotte, King and Prince Wm. Streets to the Ferry. Judging by the banners six lodges were represented-Vernon, Eldon, New Brunswick Johnston, Havelock, and Dominion. Sprinkled through the ranks were members of country lodges. There was nothing particularly striking about the demonstration, except the absence of persons prominent in past years. Some of the procession sts wore red sashes, but the majority had the supposed-to-be-emblematical orange. A few wore three cornered hats instead of the "tile" and perhaps a dozen carried swords. They appeared to be peaceful men, however. The usual good natured crowd gathered on the streets, and indulged in considerable chaff at the expense of the "order." Capt. Hall was Grand Marshall, and Mr. John Rusk (I. C. R. Freight department) and M. B. Mitchell were aids. A special train with the party left Carleton at 7.45 o'clock for Fredericton, where the provin-

BEWARE OF THE MOWING MACHINE :-A Sussex despatch to the Globe says :- A most serious accident occurred early this morning at Dutch Valley - about four miles distant from the Railway Station. Two sons of J. H. Barnes, the younger about fourteen years of age, were in the garden. The elder began to mow with the mowing machine which was drawn towards a hen's nest in the grass, towards which the younger thoughtlessly ran, and in a moment the cutter bar of the machine struck the lad's foot, mangling it frightfully and nearly severing it just below the ankle joint. Dr. Burnett was summoned, and he called in Dr. Vail for consultation. A piece of bone nearly as large as half a hen's egg came out of the wound. The cords or tendons of the foot were drawn and left hanging like fringe. After consultation it was found impossible to save the foot, when Dr. Burnett, assisted by Dr. Vail, amputated the leg immediately above the ankle. LONDON, July 16. The Times in a leading editorial to-day says :- "The scope of the Compensation Bill respecting a 15, 30 or 50 pounds limit, which has also suggested a one pound limit, is not to be settled until a report is made on the bill, when a new amendment fixing a limit at present unknown, will be made on the part of the Government. It must be admitted the vacillation of Government has inflicted more damage and discredit on the bill than the opposition of either the Conservatives or the Home Rulers. The principle of the bill is regarded with no less repugnance by many Irish agents and landlords just now, a Liberals than by the Conservatives them. selves. There are many who, though they will vote in a last resort for the bill. look upon it with dread and dislike, and will throw the whole responsibility upon Ireland in these days to have a daring, devilthe Ministers. Two out of every three English Liberals regret the bill, and even some influential Irish members consider is unnecessary and mischievous. The bill has been cut and carved to meet the about 26 years of age, six feet high and of exigencies of the hour, as if it were promoted by the Ministry for the minority, and compelled for that reason to defer to suggestions from every side. It is possible we have not seen the last of the changes. Even now the bill has passed through so many and such unexpected vicissitudes that only a bold man would venture to predict its ultimate fate. We trust at any rate that whatever Parnell may think of the final proposals of the Government, we have at least reached the limit of the change. Nothing can be more disastrous than the state of unsettlement and anxiety in which public feeling in Ireland is kept by the incessant transformation scenes in this Parliamentary drama. An eminent one of Gladstone' law officers in 1870, in his charge to the Grand Jury of the County Kerry the other day, speaks gravely of the excitement an social danger produced in Ireland by agrarian agitation and warns the country that communists doctrines are contagious and attacks upon rights of property wi not confine themselves to land. The effect of discussions upon the bill have been to arouse the people of this country to the peril with which they are threatened, not in their relations with the Irish landed proprietors, but as capitalists having in vestments in any business connexion with Ireland. If this awakening could lead watchfulness and caution, and regard fo hazardous legislative experiments, the i jurious consequences of the bill may be counterbalanced by some permament ad

The Russian Imperial Yacht.

A correspondent of the Toronto Glob

writing from London, July 8th says .-Yesterday Glasgow was quite en fete in honour of the launch of the Livadia, the new Russian Imperial yacht. Some months since I gave a short description of this remarkable vessel, which is certainly worth of notice, both on account of the magnificence of its appointments and of the peculiar lines on which it has been constructed. The idea, as I think I explained before, which the designers had before them, was to build a yacht that should afford the accommodation of a floating palace for the Emperor and his suite, and at the same time possess a very considerable rate of speed. To do this they finally decided upon a modification of the system of circular iron clads designed by Admiral Popoff, and they planned a vessel of which the hull is shaped like a turbot-in reality a An explosion took place this morning in | broad, shallow oval-above which are the London & South Wales Colliery Com- erected the large and sumptuous saloons miles from Newport. It is supposed that solution of the problem quite in opposition 119 men were in the pit at the time, and to the method usually followed in order to obtain speed. Naval architects have hitherto always aimed at great length and ineness of lines when high speed is an important consideration. But so far as it is possible to judge at present, there seems to be no reason to doubt the success of the experiment tried in the construction of the Livadia. No other vessel could carry on its back a palace as great as that which i bears; its breadth of beam will give it exceptional steadiness, and with its three powerful engines a speed of at least fourteen knots an hour is reckoned upon. The dimensions, I may state, are as follows :-Length, 260 feet; breadth, 150 feet; depth, 50 feet; and tonnage, 11,600.
