PEPSIA are soon relieved by

JOHN PALLEN,

Five Minutes' Work.

BY MRS. FRANCES D. GAGE. "Here, Lizzie, I wish you would put a few stitches into my coat; it's so shabby." "It's so Frank; but really I think you had best take it to the tailor." "Take it to a tailor! By George! but that's a huge idea. Why, there's not five mintes' work to be done, and the tailor would charge a dollar." "I suppose he would, but I don't see how I can do it to-day. Walter is very fretful, and you know he kept me awake nearly all night." "Little imp! It does not seem to me there ever was so cross a young one. Always some excuse! Well, you must mend my coat, anyhow."

I will try and find time." "Try! just let him squall! 'twill do him good-strengthen his lungs."

"Then, you know, it is ironing day." "Well how many more excuses? I'll put it on rips and all, if you are going to make a fuss.

But it's a long job, and one I am not used to; and with my dinner to get, and baby, and ironing I do no see yet, how I can get it done. But I'll do my best."

Such was the conversation that passed between a young husband and a wife of eighteen months standing.

Frank Burton was what the world calls a real driver. He made anything that went through his hands insure to his own benefit. Everybody liked him because he was so frank, and withal so honest and upright in all his dealings with his customers. He was well educated for a business man; lived in society: had made up his mind that he could support a wife, and, according to his reckoning, save something to boot. Yes, to be sure he could. There were six dollars a week for board, one dollar and dimes innumerable for taking his lady acqaintances to ride, to the theatre, to ice cream saloons, balls, operas, etc.

"By George!" he exclaimed, as he cast up his yearly account, "that's huge; enough to break a fellow; a thousand a year; it won't do; I'll marry and settle

So he applied to Lizzie Forsyth to be his wife; and he was soon in possession.

A snug house was rented, and the earnest. The five rooms cost two hundred dollars a year, and were prettily work.' furnished. Lizzie preferred to do all Sometimes by her needle she earned a dollar extra. Then, as it was a little lonesome for Frank, he brought home several clerks as day One thing more. I have been at work boarders, at four dollars a week. Still, with all this, he would tell his acquaintances how much less it cost him to live now he supported a wife. He never seemed for a moment to realize that she it was who was saving all these expenses, and that if he had not earned a dollar, her busy hands would have paid the rent and kept him from starving.

So the matter stood when he asked his wife to mend the coat. Lizzie drew a deep sigh after he was gone, and hurried her dishes away as fast as possible. The coat was of broadcloth, and was his wedding garment; but it was well nigh wearing out, broken under the arms, the cord and lining in rags, the sleeve linings broken loose, buttons worn off; in fine, there was nearly a day's work. She sat down to the coat with hearty good will, determined to do her best. Her needle flew fast, but every moment it had to be laid down to see to dinner or hush the baby. The hours wore away, and though she did all she possibly could, the job was still undone at sundown.

Walter cried incessantly. He looked pale, as his eyes were dim. She then remembered Frank's words, "let him squall," and let him cry half an hour or more. Oh, how it wearied her to hear her darling cry for its mother. Tears swam in her eyes as she thought sunshine which did not depart when he of appreciation of her labor. She thing to speak a cheerful word when you AND OTHER POEMS. think of the toil she had put upon it. "And what if he don't," she mentally said ; "I shall in my own spirit know all I have done, and that is enough." But Lizzie was strong hearted as well as dutiful. So she shook off her discontent, and became as cheerful as possible. Then she worried through supper getting, and with much managing had all things done by the time that Frank came in with his companions.

"My coat done, Lizzie?" "No, not quite."

"There's a woman for ye, boys. One half of them would let a husband go out of the elbows a week before they would turn aside from any plan of their own. All the ironing completed, I'll be bound,

Lizzie was taking her biscuit out of the oven, and the young men did not see the deep flush of pain that flashed over her weary features.

"Will you bring in a pitcher of water, please?" she said pleasantly.

"There it is again; when I was a bachelor I had nothing to do but hand my coat over to the tailor, give him a dollar, and 'twas done in a jiffy, and not any grumbling. No water to fetch when a fellow's tired either."

Lizzie was nervous, was tired with household work and care. She could not endure his badinage, although half playful. She hastily set the biscuit on the table, and saying simply "supper i ready," stepped into the bedroom and burst into tears. Her tears did not flow long, though she was deeply and wrongfully hurt in her feelings. Her heart gained in its natural relief, and after pretending she was getting Walter asleep (which she actually did) she bathed her eyes and came out, washed her dishes, and sat down again to the coat. Frank sat watching her flying fingers for an hour or two, as he laughed and talked with his friend, thinking to himself that every turn would be the last. At nine o'clock she had set the last stitch. The coat looked like a new one all around. As she finished, she looked up with still a shade of sadness upon of the food, low spirits, general debility, her brow.

made to-day, Frank?" asked Lizzie in a very earnest tone. "What do you want to know that for ?" was his answer. "For my own satisfaction; certainly I should feel an interest in all your affairs."

"Well, I think the shop has cleared twenty dollars." "How much do you count your own

"No less than five dollars a day." "How many hours do you labor "Ten is the legal time now-a-days. I dont generally work that many. But what are all these questions for ?"

"Because, Frank, we are husband and wife. We expect to live the rest of our lives together, and if there is harmony in our marriage relation, there must be justice and right. You may call me daily to appreciate anything you can do. You have earned five dollars to-day; and the shop has cleared twenty. Yet to save you one dollar, I worked ten hours on your coat, and six on your breakfast, dinner and supper, and making your home pleasant and comfortable. To save you that dollar, have had to hurry all day, to put all my work out of my line, and to really neglect our darling boy, who should be our first care, and the last thing under any circumstances to be set aside."

"I had not thought of that." "I know you had not, Frank, so shall freely forgive you, but I must insist that hereafter I may be allowed to be my own judge of what work I had best do, and shall not expect to be threatened, nor hear myself accused of not being willing to do my duty." Frank felt the force of her words and sat silent.

"One thing more, Frank. I want to say while I am about it, that I don't want to hear you talk about supporting your wife. I am not to be supported a week for washing, and then quarters | while I am able to support myself. I find on looking over my books, that the profits of my labour amount to five WALTHAM, dollars a week, and the board of yourself, myself, and the baby beside. Then I do all your extra work and my own all this saving has gone into your capital to be invested, and to help you make your twenty dollars a day. Out of this comes the five dollars you call the worth of your day's work, while I must labor with weary limbs and aching head and eyes to save you one dollar, in mending work of supporting a wife began in an old coat, which when done, would not sell for the amount of your ten hour's case against me, Lizzie.' "No, Frank, not a case against you; I could not do that; but I am stating facts. three hours since supper, and you have been entirely idle, not even rocking the cradle, which I have been obliged to do half a dozen times."

"Lizzie, don't say another word, and I'll never do so again," said Frank, springing from his chair, to jog the cradle, where the boy was nestling.

'You shall never mend another coat." "Yes, but I will," answered Lizzie, advancing to the cradle, "only don't tell me ten hours work can be done in five minutes, nor ask me to let the baby squall again.

She lifted Walter from the cradle. They stooped to kiss his fair, rosy cheek but made a mistake, and kissed each other, while Frank whispered: "God bless you, Lizzie, I never thought of all this before. I won't do it again." Six years have passed by, and Frank has kept his word.

Speak a Cheerful Word. Did you ever go out in the morning with a heart so depressed and saddened that a pall seemed spread over all the world? But on meeting some friend who spoke cheerily for a minute or two, if only upon indifferent matters, you have felt yourself wonderfully lightened. Every child dropping into your house on an errand has brought in a ray of of her hard day's work and the want | went his way again. It is a blessed knew she was making his old coat look can. "The heart knoweth its own as well as new. But he would never bitterness" the world over, and good words to such hearts "are like apples of gold in pictures of silver." Even strangers we meet casually by the way, in the travellers' waiting-room, are unuse. It is the one with pleasant words on his lips to whom strangers in strange lands apply for advice and direction in their perplexities. Take it as a compliment if some wayfarer comes to you to direct him which street or which train 1000 Qtls. COD FISH. to take; your manner has struck him as belonging to one he can trust. It is hard sometimes to speak a pleasant word when the shadows rest on our hearts; but nothing will tend more to enlighten our spirits than doing good to another. When you have no opportunity to speak a cheering word, you can often send a full beam of sunshine into the heart of some sorrowing, absent friend by sitting down and writing a good, warm-hearted letter.

THE GOOD SCHOLAR.-Two things together are the very model of a good scholar. First you must listen. You must hear; you must be silent; you must be attentive. We can never hope to gain real wisdom or knowledge unless we are willing to be taught; unless we look out for instruction; unless we fix our minds. He who is always talking without listening to what others say ; he who is always asking questions without waiting for an answer; he who allows his mind to wander from one thing to another; he who thinks he is wiser than his teachers and cleverer than his companions; he who does not look up to what he is himself, whether old or young, is not learning as Christ learnt. We must also be good askers of questions.

WM. CURREY, writes from Windsor, N. S., Dec.

'79. "The 20 inch Standard Flour Mill works satis factorily. The smut mill cleans well. The 12 inch Standard chops 12 bush, per hour The far mers look with surprise to see a mill so small work "I enclose letters from two large farmers." MR. CURREY:-I have had about 20 bush. of glad to say it's the best flour I have had in my JAMES BALLISON. MR. CURREY:-After having 15 bush. wheat ground by your new Standard Mill, I must say that you gave me flour equal to the "Canada," that I have been using. I have no hesitation in saying what it has done for me it will do for others, which should stimulate farmers to grow more grain an-JAMES DILL.
