"Advance" Scientific Notes.

Recent ocean dredgings indicate that no marine life exists at a greater depth than 150 fathoms.

The Academy of the Syncaei, founded at the beginning of the seventeenth century, is stated to be the oldest scientific society in the world. The Academy was reorganized in 1875, and has members of various nationalities.

The Swiss colony in North Carolina has discovered that the mulberry-tree grows with as much luxuriance as the cherry, and that the soil and climate of that state alike foretell the future production of silk under the most favorable conditions.

Mr. Javel says that the fatigue experienced by the eyes from reading with artificial light is due more to the want of light than to its excess. Even in a very brightly illuminated room the pupils are very much more dilated than by daylight, and this dilation produces fatigue.

A French electrician has devised an ingenious electrical low water signal for steam boilers, which indicates the existing water level at any distance from the generator, and when the water has sunk below a certain point rings a signal bell, while at the same time the sign "low water" appears on the indicating tablet.

The elephant hunters of Ceylon and India corroborate Sindbad's story that elephants, when they feel the approach of death, retire to a solitary and inaccessible valley, and there die in peace. The superintendent of elephants to the government of India states that no living man has come across the corpse of a wild elephant that has died a natural death.

In the writings of Confucius, the great Chinese philosopher, occurs the following passage: "As we use a glass to examine the forms of things, so must we study antiquity in order to understand the present." This sentence points most unmistakably to the use of magnifying glasses long before the time of the writer, who died 478 years B. C.

A very slight declivity suffices to give the running motion to water. Three inches per mile in a smooth, straight channel gives a velocity of about three miles an hour. The Ganges, which gathers the waters of the Himalaya moutains, the loftiest in the world, is, at 180 miles from its mouth, only 800 feet above the sea, and to fall these 800 feet in the long course of the river, is said to require more than a month.

It is stated that the Bank of France has almost entirely abandoned chemical tests in favor of the camera for detecting forgeries. The sensitive plate not only proclaims forthwith the doings of the eraser or penknife, but frequently shows, under the bold figures of the forger, the sum originally borne by the check. So ready is the camera to detect ink marks that a carte-de-visite enclosed in a letter may to the eye appear without blemish, while a copy of it in the camera will probably exhibit traces of writing across the face, where it has merely been in contact with the written page.

Prof. Marsh recently read a paper treating the dimensions of the brain and spinal cord in some extinct reptiles. He considered that the cerebral part of the brain in living mammals showed a decided increase as compared with the size of the extinct species. The early mammals had smooth brains, and in the later ones convolutions appeared. The brains of birds and reptiles followed the same law. A large specimen of an extinct animal from the Rocky Mountains, which measured thirty feet in length, had a brain cavity not much larger than that of a dog. There was, however, a large posterior cavity toward the spine. This suggests the idea that it is not the brain alone, but the whole nervous system, which may be the seat of mind.

"The inconvenient young lady," remarks the Electrician, "whom the newspapers have lately discovered administering electric shocks to everybody who shakes hands with her, is not an original phenomenon. To say nothing of the Canadians who habitually lighted the gas with their fingers' ends in quite modern times, Virgil tells us that the hair of Ascanius emitted a harmless flame, and Servius Tullius is known to have shot sparks out of his locks at the precocious age of seven. A more exact counterpart of our female cotemporary, however, lived at Verona about a couple of centuries ago. Cassandra Burl was unable to sleep in linen sheets because of the fire emitted from her body on getting into bed. Such were the crackling and blazing that her maids often fancied that they had dropped live cinders out of the warming pan into the bed. This is the dull season."

The investigations of Herr Weith have shown that of various bodies of water, under otherwise similar conditions, that one has the greatest quantity of fish which contains the most dissolved bicarbonate of lime. A simple explanation of this seemingly strange fact is given. The simple carbonate of lime is widely distributed on the bottoms of lakes, but, being insoluble, is not taken up by the water. If, however, the water contain an abundance of carbonic acid—which is produced, of course; by animals in respiration—this transforms the carbonate into the bicarbonate, which readily dissolves in water. It appears, therefore, that, by a sure chemical analysis, one may with considerable probability estimate the quantity of fish in a body of water; and, conversely, Herr Weith has often been able to give a remarkably accurate statement of the chemical composition of a body of water on learning the quantity of fish contained in it.

With so simple an article as a red cabbage, a very old but pretty little chemical experiment may be made by the young people, with the result of amusing and astonishing those around them. The effects may be strikingly shown in this manner: Cut three leaves of the cabbage into small pieces, and, after placing them in a basin, pour a pint of boiling water over them, letting them stand an hour; then pour off the liquid into a decanter. It will be of a fine blue color. Then take four wine glasses: into one put six drops of strong vinegar; into another, six drops of solution of soda; into a third, the same quantity of a strong solution of alum; and let the fourth glass remain empty. Fill up the glasses from the decanter, and the liquid poured into he glass containing the acid will quickly change to a beautiful red; that poured with the soda will be a fine green; and that poured into the empty glass will remain unchanged.

Mrs. Garfield.

CHAT ABOUT THE LADY WHO WILL BE HOSTESS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

She is an accomplished hostess, as well as an accomplished woman—they're two very different things. Living as the Garfields have had to live, in the most economical way, doing without elegant clothes, fine furniture, sumptuous food, good new, and rare old books, dearer than all else to them, they have contributed more to make Washington winter life pleasant and profitable than many other families who have supplemented less taste and culture with more money. Mrs Garfield's receptions have been the largest ever held by the wife of a mere representative. They have far surpassed those of more ambitious senators wives, and have approximated those of the ladies of the supreme court and cabinet families, in size merely. In attractions they have stood abreast of any of them. This simply because Mrs. Garfield is a sweet tempered, cultivated, refined woman, in whose smile it is a pleasure to bask. When we consider that, without allowing her manifold cares to interfere with the performance of her social duties, she has managed her establishment alone, and personally conducted the training of her boys for college, we can conceive the superiority, with all her social success, to the mere "society leader." Gen. Garfield is the president of our literary society, and during the past year it has met at his house. It was more pleasantly entertained there than it ever had been before. Mrs. Garfield exerted even her latent social powers that night, and it was difficult for her guests to break away from her delightful parlors. The latter, entre nous, were and are furnished in the style of Noah. That makes no difference of course, although the contrast between them and those which some of the guests had left at home was marked. There was something really pathetic to me in the information telegraphed from Cleveland that General and Mrs Garfield were purchasing furniture and a seal skin sacque. However, they can afford to gratify their taste for four years now, and forget the pinched past. What we here rejoice in is that, when Mrs. Hayes steps out and Mrs Garfield steps into the White House on the 4th of March next, there will be no abrupt turning in the course of presidential, or rather the Mrs. Presidential, social customs and decrees. Whether the diplomatic corps has its delicate palate tickled with lemonade and water at State dinners or not, we may be sure that whiskey and the White House, divorced four years ago, will not be reunited in unholy bonds during Mr. Garfield's administration. It is needless to say that Mrs Hayes will be missed. She will be missed by many of whom the world knows nothing—the naked, hungry, sick, and in prison, unto whose wants she has ministered "all so silently;" but regret will not be so poignant as it would be were she to be succeeded by an inferior woman.—Washington Correspondence Boston Herald.
