Twenty years ago he lost £30,000 by the failure of a bank, but he was in a fair way to recover from this blow when, he says, the materials of which they are made, or merely to "the establishment of co-operative stores gradually absorbed" his "best customers" and caused his London business to become unprofitable. The co-operative stores have ruined him. I am quite convinced that it is not too much to say they are gradually ruining thousands of once thriving tradesmen in all parts of the country, but especially in London. No doubt, "political economists" will be able to prove that it is quite right the tradesmen should be ruined, for the consumer gains-"we must consider the interests of the many, not of the few," and so forth, But everybody is not a political economist: I am not for one, and it does not shame who have, as they consider, brought their misfortunes upon them-the aristocracy the well-to-do generally. These people were in the habit of taking long credit, and expected to have all their whims and caprices vigilantly studied and yielded to without a murmur. I was in a shop last Tuesday when a messenger arrived from a certain great lady desiring that a large selection of the tradesman's goods should be sent to her house, it "not being convenient" for her to go to the shop. For a man to send away a good. part of his stock in the Christmas week, at the very time when strangers ore coming in to see what new thing they can find, is not a very pleasant thing to be called upon to do, but in this case a refusal was not to be thought of. The lady was not a particularly good customer, but each member in turn gives a lecture upon still it would never do to offend her. Persons of her description think nothing of going into a shop and turning everything over and taking up half an hour or more of the attendants' time, and then walking out without spending a penny. As soon, however, as they can save a few Whereas previous investigations have | shillings by going to the co-operative stores, they will at once withdraw all their custom from the private tradesman, no matter phere, M. The army is certainly no longer an aristocratic weapon, whatever it may have been in former days. The abolition of purchase has introduced the democratic element into that, and each year it must grow stronger. A Royal Duke may be at the head of it, but his true master will henceforth be "the million," and the million hate the aristocracy, and, indeed, do not much love anybody who is in the slightest degree better off than themselves. It has often been said that Mr. A. T. Stewart ruined a great many small storekeepers, but at any rate he was a storekeeper himself, and accomplished his successes by legitimate private enterprise. There could not be the same feeling of illusage in reference to him, that soon grows up when it is found that a co-operative store is underselling all its neighbors. FASHIONABLE FOOTWOMEN. - Footmen are going out and footwomen are taking their place. Dining the other night in Eaton place, the door was opened by one of the latter in a most charming and becoming livery. Black and white mobcap for head-dress, stand-up collar with embroidery, The art is called eidographie, white cravat and small pin in it, rich and the operator uses hollow pencils which | brown cloth coat with livery buttons, cut somewhat like a man's hunting coat, and pound. On exposure to air the compound a buff waistcoat with a High Church instantly hardens. Every color can be collar-such was the uniform. I was so produced, and the designs traced with the struck with the upper portion of the dress pencils are exceedingly durable, lasting as that I never thought of looking at the extremities ; but I fancy my eye once got a glimpse, going up stairs, of red stockings ware and pottery decorated by the same and shoes with silver buckles. During process. The manufacture of the pencils dinner four winsome lasses, all similarly attired, waited on me hand and foot, and certainly never was a dinner more deftly handed and served. Why not? Women are, by their nature, much better suited for this sort of work than men. The latter Mr. Jennings, the London correspondent | think nothing of eating onions or smoking of the New York World, tells the readers | vile tobacco before serving the soup, or of that journal what ruined Mr. Mechi, putting their thumbs in the gravy of one's mutton, or breathing stentorously at your "What has ruined Mr. Mechiand brought ear, or preceptibly on your cranium if it him at the age of seventy-nine to the lacks covering. Besides, there is a decided Bankruptcy Court, and perhaps to his economy; footwomen are not taxed, nor do

Fraudulent Note.
