

Miramichi and the North Shore, etc.

TOMORROW is Good Friday. COUNTY COURT items held over until next week.

THE ICE on the river is now in a very unsafe condition.

SALE OF GOODS, Hay, etc., at Mr. James Smith's, N.B., to-day at 10 o'clock.

FURNITURE - Mr. Fotheringham is receiving nice lots of furniture for the spring trade.

ST. MARY'S - Services are being held every evening of the present week in St. Mary's Church, Chatham.

GAZETTED - W. J. O'Brien, Esq., of Bathurst, as a Notary Public and Patrick Ulman of Durban, Restigouche, as Labor Act Commissioner.

HOUSE LOST - Mr. James Parker had the misfortune to lose a valuable horse and loaded sled through the ice off Crocker's shore, Durban, on Friday last.

THE METHODIST CHURCH - There will be service in the Methodist Church, Chatham, on Good Friday, in the morning at 11 o'clock and in the vestry in the evening at 7.30.

DENTISTRY AT BATHURST - M. C. Clark, Dentist, will be at the Wilbur House, Bathurst, on Monday next, 18th inst. for one week only.

THE RIVER was open as far down as Messrs. Miller's Bark Extract Factory, Durban, yesterday. It is satisfactory that the ice is melting rather than running down, so that the logs lying in the river will not be carried out and lost.

PAINEUR ACCIDENT - A young man named Wm. Combe, employed in E. Hutchison Esq.'s re-sawing mill, Douglastown had two fingers and part of one of his thumbs sawed off on Thursday last. He is a very worthy young fellow and much sympathy is felt for him.

DR. JARDINE'S CALL - St. Andrew's Church Congregation, Chatham, met on Tuesday afternoon and appointed Messrs. Wm. Sinclair, D. T. Johnston, Duncan Davidson and James Edgar to represent them at the Presbytery meeting to be held here on 21st inst. to consider Rev. Dr. Jardine's call to Brockville, Ont.

PERSONAL - Chris. Harris, Esq., of Moncton, and Mrs. Harris are visiting the family of Judge Wilkinson at Bushville.

Kennedy F. Burns, Esq., of Bathurst, and Mr. Richard Fairley of Chatham were passengers by the last English mail steam ship arriving at Halifax.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Harris of Chatham left for New York on Tuesday evening.

VERY LUCKY - Mrs. Wishart well-known to many of our readers as the owner of the farm and hotel at Wishart's Point, Tabusintac, was taken ill very suddenly on Thursday afternoon last, and was quite low at last accounts.

She is over seventy years of age, but on Thursday morning appeared to be in unusually good health. Her recovery is hoped for by a very large circle of friends.

RETIRED - Mr. Hugh Murray of Tabusintac, who has, for a long time, been keeper of Portage Island Light, and is some eighty years old, has been retired on an allowance of $125 a year. It was rumored that Mr. Duncan Robertson of Tabusintac would succeed him, but it is also said that Mr. James Chapman of Chatham is a hopeful candidate for the position.

AN ATTRACTIVE ENTERTAINMENT is in preparation for Tuesday evening next, 19th inst. in the Masonic Hall, Chatham. A number of ladies, gentlemen and children will participate and the principal feature will be the celebrated Opera, "Grandpa's Birthday" sung by a chorus of thirty children. This will be a great treat in its way and the enterprising managers should be encouraged by a very full house.

THAT POLE - The Tabusintac people are "curious" to know how it is that Inspector Mitchell reported that a white light is displayed on a pole 150 feet from the main light on Crab Island, when even the pole has not been since the fall of 1879. They are also anxious to know whether the government intends throwing away money in building a ballasted rock around the useless lighthouse.

A NORTHEAST CORRESPONDENT lets light in upon the recent reports in the Advocate concerning the destruction of a fishery Warden's shanty and the writing of a threatening letter to a person with whom the Warden boarded. We have private advice which goes to show that some of the Warden's, at least are temperate. A Warden is reported to us, also, as having fished without license with the Overseer's knowledge. These things ought not to be approved by the Advocate. It however, condones them by not exposing them and does an injustice to the people of the Northwest by charging them with incendiaryism and writing threatening letters.

NORTHEAST ITEMS - Mr. Snowball's Mill at Redbank started last week. It saws about 30 thousand per day and employs 22 men. There has been sufficient logs hauled into the boom during the winter to keep the mill going until the river opens.

There were about a million and a half of logs landed out into the tideway on the Northwest this winter.

Mezies & Adams who had the contract for repairing the bridge at Redbank have finished the work which was done under the supervision of Commissioner George Brown.

THE "ADVOCATE" will please excuse me from following it further on the Lunacy resolution business. Its inability to discern between principle and expediency is not our fault.

The same paper is anxious to wash everybody connected with the Bay de Veats Bridge. Mr. Adams is not to blame, the contractors are "exonerated," the specifications followed faithfully, the plans faultless. It must be that the people are to blame for expecting any bridge at all for the four or five thousand dollars of public money that have been expended upon it. Truly, such a paper is very useful to the public!

THE S. OF T. DIVISIONS - The following are the officers elected for the current quarter -

W. of Northumberland Division, Chatham - S. J. Frost, W. V. P. Robert Murray, W. A. D. P. MacLachlan, R. S. George Johnston, A. R. S. L. H. Abbott, F. S. Jas. Firth, T. W. J. D. Lobban, Chap. Alex. McLellan, Sec. C. H. P. Marquis, A. C. Albert Bell, L. S. Alex. McLellan, Jr. O. S.

Newcastle Division - Rev. Mr. Steele, W. P. Russell, W. A. H. H. Johnston, R. C. Miss Sarah Reid, A. R. S. John Russell, F. S. D. McGinnis, Treas. W. Grenley, Chaplain; Joseph Russell, C. H. Wyse, A. C. P. McKernan, L. S. W. McMaster, O. S.

FREAK OF NATURE - A cow belonging to Mrs. Abigail Stuart of Styntest Settlement, Tabusintac, gave birth to a lusus nature in the latter part of March. It was about the size of an ordinary calf, but was much more like a bear than anything else. The head and body had all the characteristic features of the bear. The mouth was furnished with tusks, the ears were short, the body covered with long black hair and the tail short. On one hind leg there was a formidable claw. The fore legs were bent upwards and crossed above the shoulders, while the hind legs were also turned up over the back and rested between the fore legs where they crossed each other. The creature died at its birth, but has been examined by scores of Tabusintac people and others, who agree in pronouncing it a great monstrosity. The cow was chased out of the woods by a bear last fall and was in such terror that she could not beagain induced to leave the vicinity of her owner's premises and it is thought the fright she then got may have caused the "calf" to labor in the singular way above described.

METHODIST ENTERTAINMENT - An entertainment which gave great satisfaction to the children attending the Methodist Sunday School was given in the vestry of the Methodist Church, Chatham, on Thursday evening, 7th inst. A Magic Lantern was kindly loaned by Mr. Col. Pitts and was successfully managed by the Rev. Mr. Wells. The views were first class and highly delighted not only the little folk, but the audience generally. This was followed by music, readings, recitations and addresses. Rev. S. T. Teel read "Annie and Willie's Prayer," which was well received. Mr. James Tait read "The Five Bachelors," which elicited much merriment. Recitations were given by Messrs. Irvine, Gillies, Irene Strang and Master Robert Irvine, who all acquitted themselves most creditably. An address, both excellent and amusing, was given by the popular Superintendent of the School, George Whitaker, Esq. Miss Gammon presided at the organ with her usual ability and displayed excellent taste in the selection of the pieces. Miss Ella Haviland rendered several pieces of instrumental music in her well known exquisite style, which elicited rapturous applause. After the apples and candy had been discussed by the scholars, and "Good night till we meet in the morning" had been sung in stirring style, the hour for separation arrived and all retired, feeling delighted with the character of the entertainment.

PERSONAL - Chris. Harris, Esq., of Moncton, and Mrs. Harris are visiting the family of Judge Wilkinson at Bushville.

Kennedy F. Burns, Esq., of Bathurst, and Mr. Richard Fairley of Chatham were passengers by the last English mail steam ship arriving at Halifax.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Harris of Chatham left for New York on Tuesday evening.

VERY LUCKY - Mrs. Wishart well-known to many of our readers as the owner of the farm and hotel at Wishart's Point, Tabusintac, was taken ill very suddenly on Thursday afternoon last, and was quite low at last accounts.

She is over seventy years of age, but on Thursday morning appeared to be in unusually good health. Her recovery is hoped for by a very large circle of friends.

RETIRED - Mr. Hugh Murray of Tabusintac, who has, for a long time, been keeper of Portage Island Light, and is some eighty years old, has been retired on an allowance of $125 a year. It was rumored that Mr. Duncan Robertson of Tabusintac would succeed him, but it is also said that Mr. James Chapman of Chatham is a hopeful candidate for the position.

AN ATTRACTIVE ENTERTAINMENT is in preparation for Tuesday evening next, 19th inst. in the Masonic Hall, Chatham. A number of ladies, gentlemen and children will participate and the principal feature will be the celebrated Opera, "Grandpa's Birthday" sung by a chorus of thirty children. This will be a great treat in its way and the enterprising managers should be encouraged by a very full house.

THAT POLE - The Tabusintac people are "curious" to know how it is that Inspector Mitchell reported that a white light is displayed on a pole 150 feet from the main light on Crab Island, when even the pole has not been since the fall of 1879. They are also anxious to know whether the government intends throwing away money in building a ballasted rock around the useless lighthouse.

A NORTHEAST CORRESPONDENT lets light in upon the recent reports in the Advocate concerning the destruction of a fishery Warden's shanty and the writing of a threatening letter to a person with whom the Warden boarded. We have private advice which goes to show that some of the Warden's, at least are temperate. A Warden is reported to us, also, as having fished without license with the Overseer's knowledge. These things ought not to be approved by the Advocate. It however, condones them by not exposing them and does an injustice to the people of the Northwest by charging them with incendiaryism and writing threatening letters.

NORTHEAST ITEMS - Mr. Snowball's Mill at Redbank started last week. It saws about 30 thousand per day and employs 22 men. There has been sufficient logs hauled into the boom during the winter to keep the mill going until the river opens.

There were about a million and a half of logs landed out into the tideway on the Northwest this winter.

Mezies & Adams who had the contract for repairing the bridge at Redbank have finished the work which was done under the supervision of Commissioner George Brown.

THE "ADVOCATE" will please excuse me from following it further on the Lunacy resolution business. Its inability to discern between principle and expediency is not our fault.

The same paper is anxious to wash everybody connected with the Bay de Veats Bridge. Mr. Adams is not to blame, the contractors are "exonerated," the specifications followed faithfully, the plans faultless. It must be that the people are to blame for expecting any bridge at all for the four or five thousand dollars of public money that have been expended upon it. Truly, such a paper is very useful to the public!

THE S. OF T. DIVISIONS - The following are the officers elected for the current quarter -

W. of Northumberland Division, Chatham - S. J. Frost, W. V. P. Robert Murray, W. A. D. P. MacLachlan, R. S. George Johnston, A. R. S. L. H. Abbott, F. S. Jas. Firth, T. W. J. D. Lobban, Chap. Alex. McLellan, Sec. C. H. P. Marquis, A. C. Albert Bell, L. S. Alex. McLellan, Jr. O. S.

Newcastle Division - Rev. Mr. Steele, W. P. Russell, W. A. H. H. Johnston, R. C. Miss Sarah Reid, A. R. S. John Russell, F. S. D. McGinnis, Treas. W. Grenley, Chaplain; Joseph Russell, C. H. Wyse, A. C. P. McKernan, L. S. W. McMaster, O. S.

FREAK OF NATURE - A cow belonging to Mrs. Abigail Stuart of Styntest Settlement, Tabusintac, gave birth to a lusus nature in the latter part of March. It was about the size of an ordinary calf, but was much more like a bear than anything else. The head and body had all the characteristic features of the bear. The ference for the name Tory), these writers can never refer to the leading Liberals or their party, except as "Grits," which is held by those who use it to be a term of great reproach. The Liberals, we are glad to say, use no such tactics. They follow the English practice, under which each party is spoken of by the name which historically belongs to it.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE S. R. THOMPSON, Q. C.

We learn from Tuesday's St. John Globe that the funeral of the late S. R. Thompson, Esq., took place that afternoon from his late residence, Chipman's Hill. The coffin, which was of polished oak, was enclosed in a heavy leaden casket, hermetically sealed. It was covered with some handsome floral tributes and immortelles, the most conspicuous among which was a magnificent wreath of calla lilies. The pall-bearers were Chief Justice Allen, Judge Duff and Judge Watson, Chas. W. Veldon, Esq., Thos. Gilbert, Esq., and Henry Gilbert, Esq. Rev. Canon DeVeber and Dr. Wm. Bayard preceded the hearse; then came the mourners and the members of the legal profession, among whom were the Hon. Provincial Secretary, the Attorney-General, and a number of other gentlemen. A large concourse of citizens followed. The remains did not go to St. Paul's church, as was expected, but at once proceeded to the Cemetery, where the beautiful and impressive services of the Church of England were performed by Rev. Canon DeVeber.

Narrow Escape of a Restigouche Sportsman and His Guide.

A critical adventure is told of a prominent citizen who left here on Wednesday the 6th inst. for a trouting expedition in the vicinity of Mission Lakes, back of Cross Point. The sportsman arrived early at the house of one, Mr. D., who had for nearly accompanied him in one of those arduous expeditions. Before starting out they provided themselves with the usual solids and liquors. They arrived at the Lake about 2 p. m., where they at once commenced cutting a hole in the ice, through which they intended to drag the speckled beauties from their native element. But, to their sorrow and disappointment, before the hole was completed for fishing the ice-chisel became detached from the handle and sank in the depths below. This was a sad catastrophe, but after taking refreshment, the considerably brightened sportsman's wit they concluded to start off for Little River, a stream not far distant, where there was a possibility of capturing some fish. But on arriving at this stream they were again disappointed. It now being late in the day they concluded to return to their respective homes. Before starting on their homeward journey each again "refreshed" himself, the supplies being now considerably diminished.

Bad luck, however, still followed and, from some cause, they mistook their way and went in a direction opposite to the right one. Crossing a thickly wooded ridge of some four or five miles, they struck a small stream, which they did not recognize, and finally concluded they were lost.

In this dreadful dilemma the sportsman's presence of mind did not forsake him and, without any hesitation he, at once, proceeded down the stream, thinking, no doubt, they would come out somewhere all right. By this time Mr. D.'s strength had begun to fail. Finally, he became so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who, from frequent habit, had accustomed himself to such tramps. The latter, after leaving with the guide the balance of the refreshments and taking an affectionate farewell of him, proceeded on his way. After travelling five or six miles through alder swamps and over craggy rocks and fording the stream several times, he reached an old barn about 11 p. m. Here he concluded to build a fire by tearing some shingles from its walls and, after several attempts, finally succeeded. By this time darkness had set in and he was endeavoring to reach his home, but he had become so tired that he could no longer keep up with the sturdy sportsman who