"The Last Straw." BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"Adeline was a young housekeeper We're all young housekeepers in our time," said Aunt Betsy, placidly polishing her spectacle glasses as she sat by the fire, "and experience can't be learned out of books like spelling and ciphering and the rule of three. And our Adelaide was like all other brides she supposed that when she got married, she was going to step right into Paradise. Dear knows what girls are thinking about, to make such a mistake as that. But there-we're all mortal! If we wasn't, some of us would be angels, and some of us t'other thing-and I take it, that isn't the Lord's intentions at feet.

"Yes, as I was saying, Adeline she was a young huosekeeper,-and, of course, it was very kind for all her husband's relations to come and visit her just as she was putting up her curtains and putting down her carpets. Uncle Peter Poole, too, on Adeline's own side, came on from Wisconsin, with his wife and the two boys. Said he shouldn't have thought of such a think if Adeline hadn't been housekeeping. And I don't suppose he would; for Uncle Peter Poole was one of your economical sort, and hotels do cost a deal of money. And old Miss Caroline Carter with her mother-they came; and Amariah Hazeldean came; and finally, Adeline and her husband, they slept on a mattress on the kitchen floor, and I stayed o' nights at Miss Delford's, the milliner, two doors down the block. It was pretty hard, as you may believe, and Adeline said she didn't know how in the world she was going to stand it. But John Henry said it was our duty to be hospitable, and, after all, the relations couldn't stay forever. But after a little while it did begin to appear as if some of 'em intended it!

"And there were other disagreeables. Uncle Peter couldn't eat salt-rising bread, and old Mrs. Carter said that yeast in any shape was poison to her. Amariah Hazeldean couldn't drink green tea, and Caroline Carter disliked black tea. Mrs. Poole said fried meat wasn't fit to eat, and John Henry's father, a nice old gentleman, only rather disposed to be fidgety, he liked his bit of bacon and liver fried in the pan with plenty of butter. Aunt Poole wanted mince pies, and Caroline Carter said people might as well swallow so much poison. Amariah liked dinner at noon, and John Henry's father preferred two o'clock, and John Henry himself had to have it at six on account of his business. And between 'em all, I did think TIN. Adeline would have gone crazy, especially after the girl went away. 'I can stand one missus, mem,' said Anne, but I can't stand twenty; no, nor no living soul couldn't!' And I didn't blame the poor creature!

"Well, but to go on with my story, The last straw that broke the camel's back was-pigs' feet! It don't sound exactly logical, I know," said Aunt Betsey, scratching the bridge of her nose, thoughtfully, with her knittingneedle, "but it's gospel truth, all the same. It was of a Monday, and the washerwoman she was busy in the kitchen, and me and Adeline we were in the dairy-room, cutting up the chickens to make a nice pot-pie for dinner, for John Henry was partial to pot-pie and said that Adeline's crust beat all creation for lightness and sweetness, though Uncle Peter Poole said that people might as well commit suicide as to eat boiled dough; when in comes old Mrs. Carter, smiling all over-she had a set of false teeth that didn't fit over well, and they did give her an awful wolfish look, when she was goodnatured!

"My dear,' says Mrs. Carter, 'what have you got for dinner?" "Adeline looked scared. 'Chicken pot-pie, Aunt Carter,' said she.

" Never mind the chicken pot-pie," said Mrs. Carter, looking as if she was all teeth. 'I was just going past a market, and I bought you a dozen pigs' "' Pigs' feet !' said Adeline, and she looked at 'em as if they were so many pigs' tails. "'I'm dreadful fond of pigs' feet,' said old Mrs. Carter. 'Give 'em a good boil, because if pigs' feet aint tender they aint nothing.' "She had hardly got out of the room, for she was very stout, and walked like a waddling duck, when in came old Uncle Peter Poole by the basement door, with a brown paper parcel under his arm. " Niece,' said he, I've a pleasant surprise for you-pigs' feet. I like 'em boiled down and then sliced off and fried with a sprinkle of powdered sage. "Adeline looked at me.

"Aunt Betsey,' said she, 'what am said I. 'Go on with the pot-pie.'

"Just then the door-bell rang, and Beef, Iron and Wine, in came a package with Amariah Hazeldean's name written in the corner .-'With compliments!' and if you'll believe me, it was half a dozen pigs' feet!

" Is everybody crazy? says Adeline. "She hadn't fairly got through saying it, before in walks old Miss Caroline | Fluid Magnesia, Boyd's Minature with a basket. " 'I hope you won't think I'm taking a liberty, Cousin Adeline,' said she, triumphantly, 'but I was down to a wholesale grocer's, this morning, to get some cocoa for ma, (ma finds that she cannot drink tea nor coffee, so if you won't mind making the cocoa, we shall be so much obliged), and I saw the loveliest pigs' feet there, so white and fresh, my dear! And if you'll just put 'em in a pickle, we can enjoy 'em for a relish.

"Adeline stood a minute, looking first at Caroline Carter and her basket, and then at the piles of pigs' feet on the table. And then she put down her knife, and untied the white housekeeping apron that she always wore in the kitchen. "'Bless me, Adeline,' said I, 'what are you going to do?' "'I'm going home to ma,' said Adeline, with a little hysterical gurgle in her throat. "'And who'll cook the pigs' feet?' said old Miss Caroline Carter, bristling up like a setting hen.

"'I don't know,' said Adeline, 'and I don't care! One thing I do know, I Chatham, July 26, 1881.

won't submit to this imposition any longer! I'm going home to ma.' "So she did. And I gathered up all the pigs' feet and put 'em in the biggest pot I could find, and biled 'em and served them up, piping hot, for dinner.

Automatic Reed Organ.

'THE ORGUINETTE may now be called a celebrated instrument. In tone it is akin to the Cabinet Organ, but the organ must be n anipulated by an artist in order to produce music; the Orgunette is on the other hand entirely mechanical in its action, and at trifling expense it can be made furnish an unlimited supply of all kinds of music." - Toronto Globe.
"THE ORGUINETTE is indeed a musical wonder. It is a miniature reed organ, with as strong and melodious a tone as the Cabinet Size. It surpasses the Cabinet Organ, for the reason that the ignoramus in music can play it as well as the most accomplished professor. The Orguinette is strong and accurate in its mechanism, and consequently not liable to get out of order." - Montreal "THE ORGUINETTE is the most perfect automatic musical instrument yet invented, its epertoire is unlimited, the tone is remarkably good."—Montreal Star.
