his judgment until nearly five o'clock, and the House was prorogued two hours be-Judge Palmer said he would consider it altogether as an ex parte application. He explained that Bishop Sweeney was present at his notice. It was not at all necessary for him to notify him to appear, and he only did so as he wanted to hear all the facts about the case he could, not to influence his judgment on the application in any way, but to aid him in considering the matter fairly, for, not having any precedent to be guided by, and owing to the extraordinary novelty of the case, he felt himself placed in a very embarrissing situation. He said he was willing to hear the Bishop as well as Mr. Quigley on any matter in connection with the case they desired to bring up In opening, Mr. Quigley called His Honor's attention to the bill entered by the plaintiff's in the suit. He said O'Sullivan, who signed himself "agent," is unknown here, and he would prove that the material facts that he had sworn to in the bill he did not know of his own knowledge. In fact, when they started, he advanced them $200 each to pay their expenses with. They say, in a manner, that they were turned off in disgrace by His Lordship, who did not want them longer and would not have them. The truth was, when the Board of School Trustees offered to take their schools, in order to come under the system, they should have undergone examination to receive certificates as teachers. This they were afraid to do. His Lordship tried to get legislation for them that they might teach without, but he did not succeed. It appears, His Lordship said in the first count rela then, that while any increase in the number ting to the Christian Brothers' right to the of thunderstorms is extremely small, and fund, he never considered that they had a there is in some cases even a decrease, the lightning-risk shows a very large increase, and in no case a decrease. Thus, to increase of risk from lightning must be regarded as not due, unless in very slight measure, to meteorological influences. This appears more distinctly from the fact that the increase of lightning risk is proportionally greater as the compared years that he was going to apply for a bill, but it are farther apart; but it is not so with the ample, is less since 1874 than 1862.) To explain the increased risk by telluric passed the Lower House without dissent, changes, Herr Holtz supposes the clea but when it got in the Upper House, a ance of forest land has much to do with it member was kind enough to send him a also, the increase of railways; both of thes bringing thunderstorms more to towns and villages. Another probable cause is the increased use of metal in house-building.

Brother Tobias, at the time of presenting the bill, told him would not affect His Lordship's diocese, as it only applied to Chatham. The bill copy of it, and he at once saw that it was clearly intended by it that the Brothers should have the administration of the fund. His Lordship stated his objection to it and the section was altered. In re- tion exist, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral ough gard to the invitation to come here, he to be known and used. There never
