Miramichi Advance.

CHATHAM, JUNE 2, 1881.

Lines in Memory of Mrs. Ellen Stuart.

She is gone! the one we loved, And left behind the soul, Oh, it is hard, but we must know 'Twas by the hand of God.

She is gone! her hands are folded, And her eyes are closed, Gone at the Saviour's calling, As in a sweet repose.

She is gone! a vacant chair Is left, but we are best, When we know that she has entered On her great reward and rest.

"Advance" Scientific Miscellany.

A new form of thermometer indicates the temperature of any place at a considerable distance through the agency of electricity.

The museum at Booklik, in Egypt, contains what has been called "the oldest picture in the world"—a fresco from a tomb at Waydoom representing six geese.

Two naturalists have found that the trunks of trees undergo daily changes in diameter. From early morning to early afternoon there is a regular diminution, followed until twilight by an increase. This is repeated at night.

By means of the "detective camera"—a new feat in photography—photographs may be taken in the street, or in any other place, without the knowledge of the individuals being photographed. The apparatus appears externally like a book or small box.

A telegraph wire in India is stretched between the summits of two hills—each hill being 2000 feet high—across the Kinnaird river. The span of wire is over 6,000 feet in length, and is believed to be the longest in the world. The only engineering appliance used in stretching this cable was a common windlass.

It has been proven by experiment that the tarring of ropes slightly diminishes their tenacity against a pulling strain, but preserves in them a high average of tenacity much longer than in the untarred ones, on account of the protection the tar affords against the destructive action of the air and moisture.

Other creatures besides man have the same gift of adapting themselves to circumstances, in a limited degree. How is it that the dog, who is second cousin to the wolf, can be willing to become the servant of man and run and fetch for him, and take his food from his hand, and die for his master? How is it that the descendant of the wild steed of the desert could ever be reduced to the menial position of a poor omnibus horse, stumbling over rough cobblestones and gutters, with a whip over his head, and a heavy load of human being dragging behind? How is it that the haughty elephant does not break his heart when he finds himself marched about as a show, subject to the tyranny of a keeper, whom he could wipe out of existence at a blow—trunked to bow and snort and wave his fringed about, and make a fool of himself in general, and all for the amusement of such a pigmy race as ours? How is it that the bird, whose home is among the clouds, can be content to settle in a little cage of wire, and even lay aside his wild-wind notes, to copy the tinkling melody of a piano wire? They get used to it, that is all you can say.

The skulls are catching," I used to hear an old lady say in my childhood, and never was a truer word spoken. If any one does not know what "the skulls" are, I should be happy to give all the information in my power. They are no low spirits, grief or even temper.

When one person is low-spirited others may attempt to cheer him up. When he is in a good mood they may try to cheer him up, and when he is in a bad mood they may try to cheer him up. It is a very curious thing that the skulls are something different from all these—a moody, grumpy, disagreeable condition, to which nothing in nature is so much akin as a wet day in November.

Let one person of a family come down to breakfast with the skulls, and persistently remain in that condition, and before the meal is over every face at the board will look long and sorrow, and every eye dull. Requests for "more coffee" will be grumbled out as though they were petitions for more poison. "Pass me the butter" will be uttered as though the speaker meant pass me the poniards. Every dish will fall under a ban, and the very eggs seem blighted.

Finally, those who go out will get their hats with a sort of fog upon them, and solemnly grow "good morning," and leave those who remain in a state of gloom, which causes them to retire to their chambers to weep.

Skulls in the evening are even worse, and skulls at a picnic spread like wildfire. In fact, the disorder is so contagious that it is my opinion that the moment any one is seen with fallen cheeks, protruding lips, bent brows, and an air of contemplating suicide, that the person should instantly be requested to absent himself, and on refusal should be escorted to some lonely spot where he can sulk it out without infecting others, just as children in a boarding school, who are feverish and spotty, are sent away at once lest they should be getting something of the very same kind.

Indeed, stricter measures should be taken than if he had the measles; for were he so afflicted, he would be anxious that no one else should take the disease from him, while there is nothing that a sulky person desires so much as to make others as sulky as himself, and he generally accomplishes his purpose. "German Syrup." No other medicine in the world was ever given such a test of its curative qualities as BOSCHER'S GERMAN SYRUP. In three years two millions four hundred thousand small bottles of this medicine were distributed free of charge by Druggists in this country to those afflicted with Consumption, Asthma, Croup, severe Coughs, Pneumonia, and other diseases of the throat and lungs, giving the American people undeniable proof that GERMAN SYRUP will cure them. The result has been that Druggists in every town and village in the Canada and United States are recommending it to their customers. Go to your Druggist and when they know about it.
