

Peter Cox invested nothing in politeness. At all events he did not do it when he entered business.

Peter was a builder by trade, and one of the most thorough and faithful workmen in the country. If he undertook a contract, he was sure to perform his part punctually and properly. Still he was not always employed, for many who might otherwise have hired him, were repulsed by his uncouth manner of treating them, and sought assistance elsewhere.

"Peter," said his wife to him, one evening, "do you know that you have lost a good job by offending Mr. Graham?"

Peter looked up from his paper and asked her what she meant.

"I mean," she replied, "that Mr. Graham has hired Leavitt to build his new house."

"Well—what of it?" said Peter, rather crustily.

"Why, I am sure that he meant to have hired you to do the job; and that he would have done so had you not offended him."

"How did I offend him?"

"By not listening to him when he wished to describe the plan for the building."

"His plan was a foolish one."

"Well, suppose it was; if you had felt it to be your business to tell him so, you might have done it in a polite way."

"Bah!" cried Peter, with a snap of his finger, "don't talk of politeness in business. If I were to bother myself to be polite to everybody who happened to call on me, I should have my hands full."

"I think it would pay," ventured the wife.

Peter puffed at the idea, and then told his wife he wanted to read.

About a month after this, Peter came home in unusual spirits. He had been out of work some time, and he had been rather moody and crusty. His wife noticed the change, and asked what had happened.

"There's a prospect of work," he replied, "we are to have better times in town. Sumner Wilkins, of Byfield, has bought the whole of the water privilege on our stream and is going to erect a factory here. I think I'll get a job. They say that Wilkins had rather have some one here to do it, and my friends will recommend me."

Mrs. Cox was highly delighted, for she knew that such a job must pay well; and she hoped that her husband might not get disappointed.

A few days afterward an order came for some window-blinds; and one afternoon, while he was busy at his bench, a man came and watched him at his work for a few moments without speaking. He was a middle-aged man, rather coarsely clad, and Peter supposed it must be some one who wanted work.

"How do, do?" said the stranger, as Peter laid aside the slate which he had just finished.

"How do's do?" returned Peter in sort of uncouth grunt.

"That looks like good lumber you're working there," remarked the visitor.

"It's good enough," was the response.

"What is such lumber worth here?"

"I don't know." And as Peter there answered he took another slate and began to plane it.

"I suppose you buy some lumber, sir?"

"I do when I want it," returned Peter, without looking up from his work.

"Is there any in town to be sold?"

"They'll tell you at the mill. I don't saw lumber myself."

But you know the value of it," remarked the stranger, with a slight touch of feeling in his tone.

"Who told you?" retorted Peter.

"I supposed, as you were in the habit of using considerable lumber of various kinds, that you would be a proper person to ask."

"Well, sir," said our grouty builder in his uncouth, unkind, and ungentle manner, "it so happens that I have something else to attend to besides keeping the price of lumber for every body who may happen to want a few boards."

"Ah! yes; I didn't know you were so busy," returned the visitor, in the coldest and most polite manner imaginable. "Pardon me if I have interrupted you." And with this he left the shop.

Peter Cox had done no more in this instance than he had done a great many times before, yet he could not put it out of mind. Somehow it clung to him, and even after an hour had passed, he found himself wishing that he had treated his visitor with a little more decency. But it was too late now.

Peter got his blinds all made, and then awaited news from Byfield, as was expected that Sumner Wilkins would soon make arrangements to commence operations. He felt sure of the job as his friends had seen Wilkins, and recommended him strongly. It would be as good as three dollars a day to him for several months.

One morning, as Peter came out of the street, he heard it remarked that Wilkins had got his hands all engaged, and would break ground very soon. It could not be possible, thought our builder. Surely he would have had some notice of such a move. Half an hour after that, he was standing at the door of a grocery, when a man drove up in a carriage, and came into the store.

He bowed to one or two who stood there, but gave Peter only a cold look.

It was the man who had called at his shop two weeks before, and inquired the price of lumber. He was dressed as plainly as ever, but he drove a splendid horse, and the carriage was a costly one.

"Who is that man?" Peter asked after the stranger had gone.

"That?" returned the bystander, in evident surprise. "Don't you know him?"

"No. Who was it?"

"Why, that is Mr. Wilkins."

"Sumner Wilkins, of Byfield?" The man who is going to build the factory?

and Hypophosphites. Since Northrop & Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda came under my notice, I have tried it, and take great pleasure in saying that it has given great satisfaction, and is preferred to any I have ever used or recommended. I have used it in my own family almost as a beverage during heavy colds, and in every instance a happy result has followed. I cheerfully recommend its use in all cases of debility arising from weakness of the muscular or nervous system."

Honor to Whom Ho or is Due.

Honor the name of Dr. Scott Putnam, inventor of PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. Many less deserving men have their names enrolled among those considered benefactors of their race. Why not his? A-k those who have used Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor what they think of it. Their thankful hearts cannot sound his praise too high. Safe, sure and painless. Beware of cheap substitutes. Sell everywhere by druggists, &c. N. C. POLSON, & CO., Kingston, Proprietors.

How to Become Rich Suddenly.

In the quiet hours of reflection, when a man sits down and reflects upon the seemingly uneven distribution of wealth in this country, and even all countries, it causes a dismal attack of blues to be produced. The supposition of one who is ignorant of the regular supply of food for himself and his family is to come from the morrow. He thinks over the millions accredited to Vanderbilt, Gould, Keene, Stewart, Wanamaker, Lowillard and many others whose names are as familiar as household words. He sighs for sudden wealth, and in his despair often would stop at no extremity, however desperate, to have even the title of riches the more fortunate seem to despise. He overlooks entirely a fact made known to everybody for years through the press that The Louisiana State Lottery Company at New Orleans, La., on the second Tuesday of every month distributes hundreds of thousands of dollars in daily fortunes to applicants to the Lottery. Druggists at New Orleans for the sum of $5 a whole ticket, or one-fifth fractionally for $1.—Ed.

CHAMPION PORTABLE SAW MILLS.

George Webb writes, St. Anne, Ontario, June 17, 1879, regarding his portable sawmill: "I have used your mill during the last season of the year and it was most successful. It cut more wood than any other mill I ever owned or used." The second year George Webb writes, "I now write full particulars about my mill." He says: "The mill cost me $600 and it will pay itself over 250 Fire Proof Champion Engines sold in 3 years. Only perfect fireproofing Engine in the world."

Most simple, efficient and portable mill of its kind in the world.
