England's Policy in Egypt. Mr. Gladstone, in his speech at the Mansion House, on the 6th of August, in referring to the stand which England had taken in Egypt, said, among other "The great question of the military expedition to Egypt, which has been touched by two Ministers of the Crown in their speeches of to-night, is indeed a matter of deep interest to us and to the world at large, and one upon which it is of vital importance that the position of this country should not be misunderstood. My Lord Mayor, it is true we have gone to Egypt with the forces of this country, in prosecution of the great interests of the Empire, which it is our duty to cherish and defend. (Cheers.) Unless those interests had existed it would not have been possible for us to find any justification for the children is not only very, but equally in intervention we have on hand. But, my lord, let it be well known and proclaimed from this spot, which affords a channel of communication to the civilized world, not inferior to the Senate itself-let it be well known and understood that those interests, though they be ours, are not ours alone, but they State in Europe, nay, with the whole civilized world. Europe to see it performed; and the power to communicate it. The native Americans include a large proportion of sons of poor farmers and artisans of the Southern and Western States, who bringing with them little or no margin to the minimum of fees, sacrifice personal comfort, like young Spartans, to their ambition. In the neighborhood of the colleges there are many shabby lodging houses which provide shelter and food for four dollars a week; and subsisting upon rations of a class at which a well-to-do laborer would complain, the young doctor pursues his studies by the light of a kerosine lamp in the attic gloom of these caravansaries. The coldest winter finds some of th students trudging to lectures and demou strations through snow and slush, without overcoats, and with shoes worn down t a papery condition of tenuity. But mixed with these plebeians are other young men of fortune and fashion, who dress exquisitely, belong to the clubs, and smoke, if a cigar, a choice Havana, or, if it is a pipe, an elaborate meerschaum, filled with aromatic perique and Turkish. At all hours until nine or ten at night students may be seen singly or in twos and threes entering or leaving the colleges, where the intricate secrets of physiology, the tissues, arteries, and nerves are revealed in the sickening atmosphere and amid the ghastly surroundings of the dissecting-room. But the atmosphere, though overpowering to a stranger at his initiation, is not perceptibly offensive to those accustomed to it, and the "subjects," instead of being repulsive to the embryo surgeons, possess an absorbing interest, and all the beauty of a perfect mechanism. There is no dearth of 'subjects" in New York, where hundreds die unrecognized in the wards of the charity hospitals, and many are picked u in the rivers with no voice or record to tell how they came to their end .- W. RIDEING, in Harper's Magazine for Octo. Mrs. A. Nelson, Brantford, writes: "I was a sufferer from Chronic Dyspepsia for eleven years. Always after eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, causing a drooping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Popplewell, Chemist, of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languidf eeling have all gone, and food does not lie heavy on my stomach.-Others of my family have used it with best results.

"The Black Watch." The 42nd regiment of Royal Highlanders, known as the "Black Watch" on account of the sombre appearance of their tartan uniform, as compared with the red coats of the majority of the soldiers of the British regulars, left Edinburgh castle on the 7th instant for Egypt. The conduct of the men was most exemplary, and instead of being confined to barracks, as is usual prior to leaving, they were permitted to mingle with their friends in the city and in no way did they abuse this confidence of their colonel. At roll call every man responded and not a soldier was under the influence of liquor. All along the line of march the streets were densely crowded, and when they reached the railway station the cheers with which they were greeted showed that the "Black Watch" is a popular regiment in the northern capital.

About Talking. A child brought up with Germans will talk German; with French, French; with English, English; with the Italians, Italian. We all learn to talk, and the child will learn to speak the language it hears, whatever that may be. And if the child hears low, vulgar, coarse, inelegant language, it will learn to use that language, and will use it. And if chaste, pure, elegant, elevated conversation, the child will imbibe the same taste. It behooves parents to take care of the manner and substance of what they say before their children, and it is also very clear that the silly, nonsensical stuff talked to Children will talk as they hear others talk. Parents and others are constantly educating this faculty in children by their conversation. To be able to speak easily elegantly, and correctly is a valueable power. If there are young men who wish to acquire this power they must speak; they must form debating societies, and go at it, no matter how many blunders they make. They will soon come to excel those who laugh at them. Attend religious meetings, and speak there; utter your thoughts and sentiments.
