Capsizing of the "Spy.

We referred a short time ago, to the capsizing of a schooner, off Richibucto, supposed to be the Spy of Chatham, and it turns out that the supposition was correct. The Spy was lumber-laden, bound from Tracadie for Pictou. She had of St. John, on hand who, as an expert, on board Capt. McLean of Chatham and helped the doubtful subjects of the raid a young man who was inexperienced in seamanship. It is the custom, we believe, goods were confiscated and sent to the with pilots to let their schooners steer Custom House, on the ground that the themselves when they are running "by the wind " and Capt. McLean, being very thereon had not been attended to. The tired, tried this "pilot trick," leaving his green hand on deck while he "turned in"
