Scientific Miscellany. Prof. C. Bing has announced the Cases of poisoning by carbolic acid are not infrequent. Two drachms is according to Dr. Reichert, the minimum fatal dose on record, and recovery rarely follows a dose of half an ounce.

Another prehistoric canoe has been discovered in the old bed of the Rhone, in France. It is about 38 feet long, three feet wide and two feet deep. It was excavated from an oak log, which was left in its original form with the beveled so as to give a sharp prow and Many astronomers have held the opinion that Alcyone, the chief star of the Pleiades, is the centre about which our solar system revolves. Very curiously, an extraordinary importance seems also to be given this group of stars by many savage and semi-civilized tribes, who have peculiar beliefs concerning it, apparently handed down to them from antiquity.

Numerous cases of fire from the spentaneous ignition of coal have been recorded. After considerable experimenting, Mr. W. M. Williams has concluded that spontaneous combustion takes place in some degree in all cases where coal is exposed to the atmosphere, although the combustion may proceed so slowly that the rise of temperature will amount to only a few degrees.

Granular vegetable carbon, saturated with sulphuric acid, of which it holds about seventy times its own volume, is now being tested as a destroyer of phylloxera. Buried amongst roots, it gradually gives off sulphurous acid gas, and this being heavier than air, not only permeates the soil, but hangs about the surface and asphyxiates the phylloxera.

Glashan, editor of the Santa Barbara (Cal.) Press, to place moving railway trains in constant telegraphic communication with the rest of the world. his method a train telegraph office would be kept in electric connection with an overhead wire by means of a truck running upon the latter and carrying a short wire leading into the car. Aside from its convenience to the traveling public, this application of the electric telegraph would seem to furnish engineers with a considerable safe-guard against accidents.

Icebergs are often of enormous size, measuring miles in area and many hundred feet in thickness. Hayes saw one reaching an altitude of 315 feet above the sea, and most of the Arctic explorers have encountered bergs of 200 feet or more in height. Pyer has estimated that in an iceberg 200 feet above the water a total height of 600 to 800 feet may, as a rule, be inferred. An exception to this rule must be the bergs Capt. Ross saw aground in 1500 feet of water. A mass of ice floating in the Southern ocean is reported by Capt. d'Urville to have been thirteen miles long with vertical walls 100 feet high.

Archæological researches have shown indisputably that the art of weaving was practised in prehistoric times. may even date back nearly to the creation of man, as fragments of woven cloth have been found among the relics of the Lake Dwellers, who are supposed to have been about the first representatives of the human race. The Bronze Lge furnishes specimens which place the art above most others in degree of perfection, even fabrics of wool being found in the remains of Denmark, Scandinavia and England—the remains of France and Switzerland yielding linen fabrics. The oldest historical reference to the art of weaving, is furnished by the Bible. Job lamented that his days were passing with the fleetness of a weaver's shuttle; and Joseph was attired in "vestures of fine

In a recent address in justification of compulsory vaccination, Dr. W. S. tics showing the decrease of small-pox modern protective measures. From 1660 to the commencement of the present century the average annual number of deaths from small-pox was upwards of 4000 for each million of inhabitants. For the decade 1801-10 the yearly small-pox mortality was 2,040 per million inhabitants. In 1831-35 it had fallen to 830. In 1840 means for vaccination were provided by the Governmnt, and the annual rate fell to 400 per million. Then came compulsory vaccination in 1853, and in the decade 1851-60 there were each year but 278 deaths from small-pox in each million inhabitants. In 1861-70 the number was 276. In 1871-80 the rate was greatly increased, but the circumstances were so decidedly exceptional that these years can afford no basis for an argument against vaccination.

A Tree Mausoleum.

The following extraordinary story is told from New Zealand with a substantiality that gives it an air of truth. But why people should climb 45 ft. high to bury their dead, when it would be so much easier to dig a hole in the ground to hide them, must remain a mystery. From what is known of savage life, it is conceivable that to conceal the criminal extermination of a tribe or camp, perhaps by some treachery, this mode of sepulture might have been resorted to, as the instincts of the aborigines are said to enable them to detect infallibly any disturbance of the ground months afterwards, however artfully concealed.

It is stated that an enormous puketea tree, supposed to be many hundred years old, was lately blown down by the force of the wind on a portion of the estate of Mr. Thomas Black, some distance up Otago Gorge, near Opotiki. An examination of the trunk of the tree disclosed the fact that the whole of the hollow interior, extending from the roots to the first fork, about 45 ft., had been filled with dead bodies. When the tree fell the bodies burst out'at the butt in the form of a confused heap of skeletons. A more extraordinary sight, says one of the colonial papers, than this monarch of the forest lying prone, and discharging skeletons, 29 TONS FOR SALE. can scarcely be imagined. Some of the skeletons, it is stated, are nearly perfect, while others are mixed up in a mass of heads, hands, feet, arms, and legs, indiscriminately. All the Maoris in the district seem to have been unaware of the existence of this natural charnel-house, and declare that the bodies must have discovery of sleep-producing qualities in been deposited in the tree long before their or their fathers' time. Single bodies have been discovered in hollow trees before, but in modern times at least no instance of this wholesale entombment in a natural wooden mausoleum is on record.

The Tax Juggle.

Says the Protected Manufacturer Why? don't we manufacturers pay our proportion with the rest? The hatter pays his twenty-five per cent. to the shoemaker; the shoemaker pays his twentyexception of the ends, which were five per cent. to the hatter, and out of the increased prices we are all able to pay the farmer more, and so it goes; everybody gets higher profits, and it is a good thing all around !"

Let us simplify. Suppose we have a community consisting of a hatter, shoemaker and a farmer. The farmer hoes his own row, asking odds of nobody; but the hatter and the shoemaker demand a bonus of $50 a year each. How, on the Protection plan, will they get it? It would be too barefaced a steal to levy a tax on the farmer alone. They will not do that. Avoiding the appearance of unjust discrimination, they will put a tax on all consumers of hats and shoes; they will make all purchasers of hats and shoes contribute alike to the Protection fund. Very fair, this looks; but mark the singular result :

The hatter pays $50 a year to foster the shoe industry. The shoemaker pays $50 a year to foster the hat industry. These two transactions balance each other. Neither the hatter nor the shoemaker are out of pocket a penny. But the farmer? He pays $50 a year to foster the shoe industry, and $50 a year to foster the hat industry; total, $100. He receives-nothing. His industry is not

There it is in a nut-shell. The Protecion tax is laid on all alike. But when the books are balanced, the hatter and the shoemaker are in $50 each, and the farmer It is proposed by Mr. C. F. Mc .- | is out $100. Who is it that pays for Protection ?-Graham McAdam.

An Obliging Man .- "You had better git rid of that stove pipe hat; you'll be ivelier without it," said a powerfully built, red-faced truck driver the other day, as he nearly drove over a delicatelooking gentleman on Park row, New York. The pedestrian had to skip in a very undignified manner to escape. "You want your neck wrung very badly," he said, as he gained the sidewalk and looked after the truck. The driver heard him and pulled up his

"Will you wring it?" he asked in gruff The gentleman took a few moments to consider the question. Then he said: "No, I'll leave that job for the hangman; but I'll flatten your nose, if that will suit you." It appeared that the proposal suited the fore the fragile-looking man. "Now flatten my nose," he said defiant-It was done before the words were well of his mouth, and he lay on his back in the gutter; the expression of his bloodbespattered countenance was that of mingled pain and amazement. "What did you strike that man for?" asked a policeman, hurrying up, and seizing the gentleman by the arm. "Because he asked me to strike him, you know," was the reply, "and as he looked like an honest, good-natured young fellow, I didn't like to disoblige him." The policeman looked at the truckman, who rose slowly, and without making any complaint mounted the seat of his wagon

"Well," said the policemen, impressively, as he walked away, "there's no accountin' for tastes."

When any of our style of machine used in millions of homes, leads all the other kinds to such an extent as that there must be some way of accounting for it all. Other Sewing Machine Manufacturers refuse to state their sales! Why? Companies have sprung up in every part of the Union and Dominion of Canada for making an imitation "Singer Machine." Why are not similar companies formed for making imitation of other Sewing Machines? The public will draw its own inference. Gold is continually counter-feited; brass and tin never! It is now ffteen years since we commenced business exclusively in the above line, and we can now point with pleasure, to hosts of patrons, who have invariably, purchased from us, during that length of time. The best goods are the cheapest in the end.
