

The Sorcerer's Pupil.

There was once a sorcerer whose name does not matter to us. However, he was a very great sorcerer, indeed, who had for a servant a broom-handle that did all his work.

You must understand that it was not an ordinary broom-handle, but a magic one. It did whatever he bade it—went up stairs and down and brought him things, cleaned his house, cooked his dinners, answered his door and worked harder than any ten ordinary servants, whenever he chose to make it, by uttering the few Latin words it became only a common broom-stick.

Now this broom-stick was very naturally the admiration of all those who saw it, and especially of the young man to whom the great sorcerer condescended to impart a little of his knowledge.

This young pupil, who had already been taught a little, was very ambitious and greatly desired to discover all his master's great secrets, and by listening at the keyhole he had learnt many cabalistic phrases, amongst them that by which he ordered the broom-handle about its household tasks.

"Hoky poky, wum, flum, fling flang fluk." Then he waited anxiously for the moment when the magician should absent himself, in order to try his power.

The time came at last.

One day the sorcerer, having put on his cloak and his peaked hat, and taken his stick in his hand, said to his pupil: "My son, I am going up to the mountain to gather herbs which, rightly infused, will turn a dwarf into a giant, and, according to the quantity given, cause any one to grow the desired number of inches. Meanwhile, clean my laboratory, and be very particular to wash well the marble slabs and basins which I use in making my wonderful mixtures."

The pupil bowed respectfully, but the moment his master was out of sight he said to himself:

"Ah, ha, my master, I have learned a little too much under your tuition to make a slave of myself. Your magic broomstick shall work for me as well as it works for you." Then throwing himself into a great armchair he crossed his feet and cried out: "Hoky poky, wum, flum, fling, flang, fluk."

At these solemn words the broomstick instantly moved out of its corner and flung itself upon the floor.

"Horrah!" cried the young man, delighted with his success. "Horrah! I know all any one need know at last. Hullo, old broomstick, scour the floor and wash the slabs and basins; use plenty of water, mind you. Hoky poky, wum, flum, fling, flang, fluk!"

The broom set to work instantly; it seized the water pail and dashed great floods of water over the slabs; everything was drenched.

"Go ahead!" cried the delighted pupil. "Go ahead! That's plenty of water; now, scour away!"

But the broom-handle, who had filled the bucket once more, flung another full bucket over the slabs, another and another, without stopping.

"Plenty, plenty," cried the youth.

But the indefatigable broom-handle still threw water on the slabs, and ran away for more, though everything was now dripping.

"Come, come," cried the pupil, "this is enough, stop! Hoky poky, wum, flum, fling, flang, fluk."

Useless command. The broom-handle disappeared, but only to return with other pails of water.

The sorcerer's apprentice shrieked his commands at the top of his voice.—"Alas! his too zealous assistant could not be stopped. Every moment it brought more water, with which at last not only the laboratory but the whole house became deluged. It dripped out into the entries, down the stairs; it stood a foot deep in the grand saloons where the sorcerer held his receptions.

Before long the slabs of the laboratory had disappeared under an actual pond of water.

"What are you doing?" the boy cried uselessly, to the broom-handle.—"What are you doing? Enough! Don't you hear me, idiot! In the name of heaven stop. Finish there, you wretched beast!"

The broom-stick remained insensible to his abuse, to the prayers that followed, and now the people began to run out into the street in which the magician's dwelling stood, and ask where the flood came from. In the end the pupil, enraged and terrified, seized a hatchet, attacked the broom-handle and cut it in two in the middle. Strange spectacle—incomprehensible result.—Instantly there were two little broom-handles, active, agile creatures running to and fro throwing pails of water about.

The pupil of the sorcerer was confounded. He chopped wildly at the broom-handle. Alas! for every cut he made two more little broom-handles started up, each busy at once in fetching water, and now forty pairs were thrown about in place of one, and the poor boy began to feel assured that he had been the means of beginning a flood which would in time inundate the whole town and drown its inhabitants. He strove to escape from the door, but in vain. The water was rising over his head.

At this instant, however, the sorcerer himself happily returned. He understood at a glance what had happened. His pupil had heard the magic formula which set the broom-handle to work, but he did not know that which must be uttered in order to stop its labors.

With this the master immediately stopped the floods and dismissed the broom-handle, now restored to its former condition, to its nail upon the wall, and returning to his laboratory, looked sternly at his kneeling pupil.

"Oh, my master, pardon me," cried the boy. "Don't punish me in any dreadful manner. I will never be presumptuous again."

"Ah, boy, boy," said the old man, "a science of which one possesses but the first words, it is better to know nothing at all about. Nothing is more dangerous than a little learning.

The Ball at Fredericton.

FREDERICTON, Feb. 17.—The Ball in the new Parliament Building last night was in every respect a success, beyond the most sanguine expectations of all its promoters.

It was attended by the elite of the Province, and for the number of the guests, the richness of their dresses, the effectiveness of all the arrangements, and the satisfaction given to all the guests, the Ball has never been exceeded by any given in the Province. The guests commenced to arrive soon after eight o'clock; they were shown to the dressing rooms, and then passed on to the reception room up stairs, where they were received by the Chief Justice, Sheriff Temple and Mayor Fisher. They then passed on, mingling with the crowd, meeting friends, chatting, or criticizing until the arrival of His Honor the Lieutenant Governor, when the Ball began. The room was crowded, and several dances were gone through before the floor was sufficiently thinned for comfort.

When it was, the scene was remarkably beautiful; the rich dresses of some of the ladies contrasting with the more simple but scarcely less effective white muslin of the gentlemen were sufficiently relieved by the many uniforms of the numerous volunteer officers. Of the ball much might be said, but it will do to say little. It was a success in every way. It was very largely attended and it passed off without a hitch of any kind. The leading members of the Government, the Chief Justice, and other members of the Bench, Mr. Speaker and members of both houses of the Legislature, with the leading citizens of the city, were present, as were many ladies and gentlemen from our own city. The music was good and all present thoroughly and heartily enjoyed the event; as is ever the case where youth and beauty chase the glowing hours with flying feet. The arrangements of the Committee were effectively made and were as effectively carried out. The Promenade Concert was not perhaps much of a success, for the simple reason that people all flocked to the ball room; but the Fredericton Band played a very efficient programme, keeping, it is said, to the delight of those who sought retirement and ease in a room which is admirably adapted for that purpose. Without this part of the entertainment, however, to ease the ball room, the crush there, would have been very great. Dancing commenced about half past nine o'clock, and continued without intermission until half past three. The programme of twenty-one dances included six waltzes, two polkas, three gallops, three mazurkas, three quadrilles, three lancers quadrilles, and one polka quadrille and it commended itself to the approval of the majority. Altogether this opening ball must be voted one of the most charming and elegant entertainments ever given in New Brunswick.

THE SUPPER was laid in the library. The table was in the form of a horse-shoe. Perhaps the common form as the horse-shoe magnet would better describe it; and there were small tables in the alcoves. No arrangement was made for seating the guests at the tables, but they stood up both on the outside and the inside of the table. Those who got a glimpse of it before it was attacked by the hungry guests saw a very beautiful sight. It was decorated with rare cut flowers and amulix in profusion; while fine foliage plants stood singly or in effective groups about it. Fruits in the "golden orange of the line," grapes and rosy red apples were effectively displayed in rich silver and glass dishes, while jellies, mangoes in many hues, and in every form of construction, added to the adornment, and relieved the chickens, turkeys, hams, tongues, and dish, immortalized by Charles Lamb, roast pig. The tout ensemble of the tables could not have been surpassed; but when the first attack of two hundred and fifty guests was followed up by unfinishing reserve after reserve, their beauty was somewhat diminished. Mr. Isaac Long, the caterer, had provided eighty turkeys, one hundred chickens, ten hams, forty tongues, a dozen pickers, with I know not what quantity of corn beef, salads, and other substantial edibles, with a plate of bouillon, warm potatoes, sandwiches, and a quantity of ices, jellies, mangoes, Charlotte Russe, fancy whips and cake of all kinds by the hundred weight. As a provider he was most liberal. Arrangements were made in another room for ice cream and cake; and in another for hot soup, and all these were liberally patronized. The waiting was good, and the whole supper arrangements proceeded without flaw. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Long, his staff of assistants, and the Refreshment Committee. It is impossible to conceive of them doing any better than they did.

Sewing Machines.

Branch Office of The Singer Manufacturing Company, Corner St. John & Duke Sts., CHATHAM, N. B.

THE GENUINE SINGER SEWING MACHINE OF NEW YORK.

Over Four Millions in Use! OVER HALF A MILLION SOLD IN 1880.

The GENUINE SINGER SEWING MACHINE has been awarded the first premium over all others more than two hundred times at Great World's Fairs, at Paris, Philadelphia and at County Fairs, in every part of the United States. The quarters of all the Sewing Machines sold throughout the world in 1880 were in "Singers," and there must be a reason for that. When any of our three quarters of a million of Sewing Machines are sold all over the world to such an extent as that there must be some use in making them for it all. Other Sewing Machine Manufacturers refuse to state their sales; why? Companies have sprung up in every part of the Union and Dominion of Canada for making an imitation "Singer Machine." Why are not similar companies formed for making imitations of other Sewing Machines? The public will draw its own inference. Gold is continually counterfeited; brass and tin never. Beware of superficially imitated machines with an indefinite number of worthless nickel plated attachments, but buy the GENUINE Y. SINGER SEWING MACHINE, the best that ever was made.

Prices and Terms at the Reach of all.

FURNITURE EMPORIUM.

The Golden Ball and Shoe Store is the oldest established in Miramichi. It is now fifteen years since we commenced business exclusively in the above line, and from new points of view, it is a pleasure to our patrons, who have invariably purchased from us, during that length of time. The reason is plain. We buy entirely from the best manufacturers, consequently our goods give satisfaction.
