The Scott Act.

The Privy Council of Great Britain has affirmed the legality of the Canada Temperance Act, which is thus finally confirmed as a binding law and, therefore, entitled to respect and observance. Since the Act came into operation in this County there has been more public drinking done than ever before-the increase having been caused by a lot of men and women, with nothing to lose, going into the business. That kind of thing ought to be stamped out at once.

MR. ADAMS.

Hon. Mr. Adams expressed his thanks to the electors for again returning him at the head of the poll and interpreted the fact as an endorsement of the Government and its policy. He would, hereafter, display a greater sense of his responsibility. pay more attention to his duties as a representative, and display greater ability than he had ever displayed in the discharge of his duties. After all, said he, addressing himself to the editor of the ADVANCE, who was reporting, honesty wins and villainy sinks.

He then became quite excited and charged that said editor had said in his that his friends would slink away in Mr. Smith) He now gave him notice that he and his friends had determined to annihilate him, his time had come in Northumberland! the grave was dug and he was to be buried deep and not have enough friends left to attend the funeral. War was to be made on him from this day-war so bitter that he must be exterminated. He was beaten to his den [not yet, for he dares to attend meetings where the sanguinary Adams raves.] The time had come when his blackguardism was to be no longer tolerated. [At this point Mr. Adams appeared more like a maniac than a gentleman and member of Government returned by a very large vote, while the gentleman who was

Mr. Adams went on to say he would rather have seen his "little friend" Park lead the poll than himself, because he was Animal life, (2) Sounds of Letters, (3) Word- so strong he could afford it. He had helped Gillespie, but Hutchison had not asked him for help, or he would also have helped him. Mr. Adams boasted of driving Smith to the platform to defend himself and denied that he made any arrangement with him in '78 to refrain from addressing public meetings in Mr. Mitchell's behalf. He had refused to make that arrangement .-[Here Mr. Adams addressed Mr. Smith in such terms as "liar," "slanderer." "thief," "villian," "renegade," etc., until the audience was thoroughly disgusted. 1-He was in Smith's office and that gentleman did not write all of his card but only one paragraph and he got him to write that "just to catch him" [could Mr. Adams let us know where the "catch" business could possibly come in? He knows he never wrote a line of his card on that occasion, but that Mr. Smith wrote every word of it for him, and that at his request. Mr. Adams continued, saying his claquers, as Smith called them, were the most respectable men of Newcastle and they saved Smith from personal violence. He charged that Smith betrayed Troy who was the only honest man on "the ticket." Smith had said to a man in Chatham on Saturday that he was glad of Hutchison's defeat.

Mr. Smith, -Name the man ! Mr. Adams,-I'll name him to Hutchison-yes and he insulted a lady about it. In my letter I told him I had some more shots in the locker for him because of his abuse of me and mine. He committed an outrage on me which I could not mention [this was the sequel to Mr. Adams' monument in the Star] and I tell him now that he can take his paper and raise political monuments for his own political corpses-

[Applause by Mr. Call and others.] Mr. Call proposed three cheers for Mr. Adams two of which were given, while the third died at about half way. While a good many were remarking that the abuse of Smith was getting monotonous and that a man with Adams' large vote ought to be more magnanimous, Mr. Park came for-

MR. PARK. Mr. Park spoke briefly and to the point. He expressed his satisfaction over the large vote he had received,-larger than that of any new candidate who had ever offered in the County-thanked all who had worked and voted for him, as well as the press which had helped him-including the ADVANCE, the opposition of which was in his favor. MR. BURCHILL on coming forward received three cheers, a compliment paid to no other memberelect. Mr. Adams had referred to alleged treachery towards Mr. Troy and the same statement had been made in the World. He had not intended to notice the World's statement on that subject, but Mr. Adams' repetition of it called for reply. He had taken no active part in forming the "ticket," but when it was formed in opposition to the Government he felt it to e his duty, as one who had opposed the Government, to do what he could to Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God the object of hie wrath appeared to pity secure the election of the gentlemen narrow-mindedness which kept them up. selected by those who were in accord with

Here Mr. Call, who had taken a rest while the cheers were being given for Mr. Burchill, jumped up and with great heartiness sung out, three cheers for Hutchison. He was gaateful to those who voted for him, and had nothing against those who honestly opposed him. He had the satisfaction of knowing that he had said nothing in the canvass against any other candidate. He did not feel-as Mr. Adams had intimated-that he was the only honest candidate in opposition to the Government. He believed that, at least Mr. Hutchison and Mr. Burchill were no less honest and no less guided by principle than himself. Echoes of the Assembly Election The World says, -A wild burst of applause greeted the close of Mr. Adams' letter. Perhaps it was because it was so well read, but we rather think it was whiskey-wildness.

"Hire a Hall," is a trite suggestion often made to gentlemen who possess the faculty of talking on a subject until they wear it out and demonstrate that they are nerely "saying their piece." Hereafter, when a speech, the burden of which is three cheers" is required, the aphorism will be, "hire a Call!"

Mr. Adams said in his declaration speech that the Government was in a minority in 1878. So it was until he and other turncoats took hold of it. The Government is again in a minority in 1882, but the turncoats are not to be had, this time. Adams, Hanington & Co. must follow other turncoats and go out.

The World, referring to Mr. Smith speech at Masonic Hall, says it "was delivered with the fluency and confidence minds by and bye and that the County of a platform veteran." With truth on would never regret having made him one his side and inspired by a sense of the of its representatives. He regretted Mr. Surveyor General's political and personal Wilson's defeat in York. [This was only outrages in the canvass, why should Mr.

Like a colossus; and we petty men Walk under his huge legs, and peep about To find ourselves dishonorable graves.

The Sun, referring to the successful candidates in the late election says-" In Northumberland, the Surveyor General, Mr. Adams, Mr. Park and Mr. Gillespie who have been running together-are elected. He ran the ticket Gillespie, Adams and Park and his friends did the same. We have no words sufficiently strong for the condemnation of such tactics.

The Surveyor General said on declara tion day that he and his friends propose to wage an unrelenting warfare against Mr. Smith until he is driven out of the County. "In Cunard's time," a steammill was built at the lower end of Chatham which was going to saw all the logs on the Miramichi in ten years, so that the Rankin water mill on the other side would have nothing to do. At the Chatham political meeting of last week Mr. Tweedie hoped that after the election was over the members of the respective parties would sink their political differences and be excellent friendsand then to show his sincerity he at once Three cheers were given for Mr. Troy lashed himself into a fury and abused an opponent of the Government in a manner which showed plainly how far he was capable of comprehending the direction in which the road to peace lay. And, then, as if to further prove how hollow and in sincere were these peace aspirations of Deputy Tweedie, his leader and principal, The official returns for Kent County are Mr. Adams' declared on Declaration Day that his policy was one of no mercy, but extermination of at least the gentleman over whom Mr. Tweedie made such a sorry exhibition of his vulgarity.

Wild ambition loves to slide, not stand, And fortune's ice prefers to virtue's solid land. said Dryden. "I will make a bold b. and M. J. McCulley, aged 14 months. "Thy stand in the legislature, but slide fortune's ice in the County, appears to have been Mr. Gillespie's motto. Ice will melt however, but the solid land will remain under those who have stood upon it. On the day of apparent defeat let those who feel that they have stood by the right now avoid the ice, whatever may be the inducements offered and be sure their feet are upon the land of principle and right.

Deputy Tweedie, in speaking for Mr. Adams at Chatham, against Mr. Smith, accused the latter of inconsistency because he did not oppose the Government in giving away the lands of York, Carleton and Victoria to aid the construction of the Riviere du Loup Railway. Well, in the first place Mr. Smith was not at the head of a newspaper at the time and he has never, at any time, either supported or condemned the Government in reference to their Riviere du Loup land grant. Moreover Mr. Smith has never written a word against public lands being given to aid railway construction in the Counties in which such lands lie. If Mr. Tweedie can show that we are wrong in this statement, let him do so. He has the columns of the newspaper of which he is a partowner for the purpose, or he may have whatever space he may reasonably require for the purpose in the ADVANCE. We must insist, however, on one condition, viz., that he shall discuss the point at issue and not besmirch our columns with such language as he used on the platform of Masonic Hall. He might, with profit to himself, take a leaf out of Mr. Park's book in the matter of decent discussion.

In his vicarial speech at Masonic Hall on Monday night of last week, Deputy Surveyor-General Tweedie-before he got to prancing round and making grimacestried to show that Mr. Smith had been inconsistent in not disapproving of the Government giving a land grant to aid the Riviere du Loup Railway, while he opposed the bogus and crooked Survey sales of land in Kent County. Mr. Tweedie is a young man, but he is quite grey, himself, in the inconsistency business. Does he remember a hungry little aspirant for legislative honors who, in 1874, ran around the County at the heels of Hon. W. M. Kelly and was dragged into the Legislature under that gentleman's coat tail, on votes which he helped to win by arguing black was white against the man for whom he was playing "second fiddle," when he was abusing Mr. Smith last week? Does he remember how the same little aspirant turned upon Mr. Kelly the moment he went to the Legislature and did all he could to undermine him? And does he remember how he elected in 1878 to stay at home for dled mind -reflected in his declaration his wonderful exhibition of consistency? speech, very severely, on Mr. Gillespie's Again,-does he know who it was that ran about among the Temperance people, professing great love for the Temperance cause and obtaining signatures for the Scott Act Petitions in Northumberland, and then went to St. John and was a lay figure on the platorm of Mechanic's Insitute among the opponents of that Act? Once more, -Does he know anything of a would-be legislative candidate who, only a few weeks ago, was denouncing the course of the Surveyor-General in the matter of the Miramishi Valley Railway and that of the Government for neglecting needed Legislative and other reforms in the Province, and yet went on the Masonic Hall platform as the deputy of the Surveyor-General and vehicle of abuse and blackguardism in that gentleman's about his intentions in reference to the | behalf? The time will yet come, we hope when Mr. Tweedie will have sufficient expression to his ideas of how to bring prudence to render it unnecessary for us about the peace and neighborly feeling to to hold the mirror up before him. When which his deputy, Mr. Tweedie, referred he has, himself, acquired a record of six in the Chatham meeting. According to months for consistency he may then ven-

Ross and Hanlan.

The New York Sportsman says: "In pursuing the magnanimous course he has done in connexion with his match race with Edward Hanlan, Wallace Ross has earned the admiration of all fair-thinking men, and, it he should be defeated by the world's champion when they do come together, every one will regret that the New Brunswicker's speed should have been secondary to his largeness of heart. For, in waiving his right to take the forfeit, which by sporting usage became his own, he also puts aside the proud title of champion of America, as both title and stakes were inseparable on this occasion. Ross evidently wants no empty honors, and if he cannot beat the Toronto sculler, he does not want to wear a title that a sick man could not do battle for. Hanlan himself may not realize what a generous action his antagonist has done, as he has a very happy (?) faculty of forgetting favors and the bestowers, but the sport. ing public will never lose sight of the truly sportsmanlike conduct of Wallace Ross." Aside from other considerations, the course Wallace Ross has pursued, in-When Northumberland's electors study dicates that he has full confidence in his ability to defeat Hanlan; that by claim-into for a new race, the entire amount of stake money to be put up when articles are signed, shows clever judgment, as from Ross' standpoint, he will lose nothing if Hanlan declines to row him, and will win the entire amount of stakes originally agreed upon, if the champion measures sculls with him. So much for confidence

The Address To The Queen
