Alcohol as a Remedy.

I do not intend to deny that the use of Complaints having been made by marksmild alcoholic tonics, as a substitute for men at the last meeting of the Dominion the frightful remedies of the mediæval Rifle Association regarding the poor Sangrados, is a decided improvement, but, still, it is only a lesser evil, a first step of a progressive reform. Alcohol lingers in our hospitals as slavery lingers in the West Indies, as the witchcraft delusion lingers in southern Europe. Has alchohol any remedial value whatever? Let us consider the matter from a purely empirical standpoint. Does alcohol protect from malarial fevers? It is a well-known fact that the human organism cannot support two diseases at the same time. Rheumatism can be temporarily relieved by producing an artificial inflammation; a headache yields to a severe toothache. For all diseases arising from Impure For the same reason the alcohol-fever af. Blood, such as Pimples, Blotches, Biliousfords a temporary protection from other febrile symptoms-i. e., a man might for- equal. Mrs. Thomas Smith, Elm writes : tify his system against chills and ague by "I am using this medicine for Dyspepsia; keeping himself constantly under the I have tried many remedies, but this is stimulating influence of alcohol. But sooner or later stimulation is followed by depression, and during that reaction the other fever gets a chance, and rarely misses it. The history of epidemics proves that pyretic diseases are from eight to twelve mes more destructive among drar drinkers than among the temperate classes; testimony of physicians of all schools, all times, and all countries, more consistent and unanimous. Is alcohol a peptic stimulant? No more than Glauber's-salt or castor-oil. The system hastens to rid itself of the noxious substance, the bowels are thrown into a state of morbid activity only to relapse into a morbid inactivity. The effect of every laxative is followed by a stringent reaction, and the habitual use of peptic stimulants leads to a chronic constiparesponsible party and should bear the loss, tion which yields only to purgatives of the

If a wornout horse drops on the highway, we can rouse it by sticking a knife into its ribs. but, after staggering ahead for a couple of minutes, it will drop again, and the second deliquium will be worse than the first by just as much as the brutal stimulus has still further exhausted the little remaining strength. In the same way precisely alcohol rallies the exhausted energies of the human body. The prostrate vitality rises against the foe, and labors with restless energy till the poison is expelled. Then comes the reaction, and before the patient can recover, his organism has to do double work. Nature has to overcome both the original cause of the
