A Singular Affair. A very singular story comes from a farm-house some four miles from Petitco. diac Station. A Mrs. McCann, whose husband was at work with others thresh. ing grain at a relative's barn within sight of his own house, was seen by him approaching, accompanied by their tour-yearold child. The woman's throat was cut, the windpipe being severed and the flesh on each side of it cut deeply. She stated that as she was at her house-work a strange man came in and informed her that he had been waiting for some time for a chance to kill her and was now going to cut her throat. He had a large jackknife in his hand and commenced his murderous work, when she told him that her husband's razor would do the job more quickly and directed him to go to the pantry and get it. This, she says, she did in the hope that she would be able to make her escape while the fellow was after the razor. He went to the pantry and, on her trying to run out of the door, she found he had locked it. He then came out of the pantry and as he was cutting her throat she lost consciousness. When she recovered he was gone. She had lost considerable blood, but was able to leave the house and go to where her husband was. Of course, the neighborhood was very much excited over the affair, and constables, the Police Magistrate of Sussex, Sheriff Freeze of Kings County and others endeavored to hunt down the man who was alleged to have committed the deed. He could not, however, be found, nor was there any clue to his identity or whereabouts. It was said a strange man had been seen near McCann's house on the day of the affair and it was put down as the work of some tramp by a number of people, while others have suggested that it was a case of attempted suicide, Mrs. McCann having lost a child recently and being mentally disturbed in consequence. If her story is true the perpretator of the crime deserves the swiftest and surest infliction of the death penalty, but it is not

A MURDEROUS TRAMP .- A correspondent writing to the Calais Times says that one night recently as William Smith, of Bailey Settlement, was returning home from St. Stephen, about 12 o'clock, a desperate character, who had been put of the 11 p. m. train, jumped upon his wagon and said he wanted to ride out with him. He rode along peaceably for four miles, when he commenced kicking Beef, Iron and Wine, Burdock Blood Bitters, the horse. On being told to stop, he swore savagely, and demanded the reins. Mr. Smith informed him that he considered he was capable of driving his own horse. The ruffian then drew out two revolvers and threatened to shoot him. Mr. Smith seeing resistance was useless, resorted to stratagem (?) He gave him the reins, and, pretending to get out, of the wagon, struck him, when off his guard, a tremendous blow with his fist under the ear, and tumbled him to the ground, where he lay senseless. Mr. Smith drove off some distance and waited to see if he recovered. In return for this kindness he received a salute of three shots, which, luckily, did not take effect.
