The Broken Cup.

'Of course they don't want me,' said Rosabel Raymond, sadly. 'Nobody seems to want me. No home seems to be open to me anywhere. When papa died he told me that Uncle Dallas would be kind to me and take his vacant place. And he is kind, after his odd, abrupt fashion. But my Aunt Alice don't care for me, and the girls looked coldly on my shabby dress and pale, worn face. Evidently I am not a cousin to be proud of. If I were an heiress things would be very different?'

Poor little Rosabel! The world looked very dark to her as she sat on the window-sill of the third story back room in the Dallas mansion, which had been unanimously voted 'good enough for Rosabel Raymond,' and watched, the dull reds and grays of the winter sunset fading out behind the crowding spires of the city.

How desperately she longed for the snow-mantled fields; the black, leafless woods of the country! She was so home sick, so solitary, so alone!

'O, Rosabel, are you here?' It was her cousin Medora's soft, sweet voice. She disliked Medora more than either Augusta or Bell, although she could not tell why, and she was vexed that Medora should see the traces of tears on her eyelashes. But Medora pretended not to notice

'We were thinking, mamma and I.' said Medora, 'that you must be terribly dull without anything to do all these dismal days.' 'It is rather lonesome,' signed Rosa-bel, wondering at her cousin's unusual thoughtfulness.

'And so,' added de o ra, with the sweet smile that Rosabel always mistrusted, 'when Miss Armitage told us of the place in the china-painting and flower-designing rooms-you always were an artist, you know, my dear-I side. exclaimed in that silly, impulsive way of mine, 'The very idea for Rosabel!' You see Miss Armitage's protege-Helen Hauvemonde-has gone to Rome to prosecute her art studies, and there is a vacancy. And the salary would be something of an object, of course, be-

'Of course it would be an object,' said Rosabel, quickly! 'You do not suppose that I do not feel my dependence here?

'And,' nodded Medora, thinking it best not to notice this outburst, 'Miss Armitage says you can obtain excellent board for four dollars a week with widow iady near the rooms, and that would save you a de l of time and no end of fares. So if you conclude to accept the position perhaps you had better come down into the drawing-room and see Miss Armitage.'

If there was anything which Rosabel Raymond loved it was her pencil. Water colors were expensive and drawing-boards came dear, and Aunt Alice thought it very unfeminine for a woman to set up an easel and a palette, full of oil colors, 'like a man,' so that her tendencies had since her residence in her uncle's house been literally starved. Here at last was the much-longed-foropportunity, and she rose with alacrity and followed Medora Dallas down the stairs.

Mrs. Dallas and the Misses Dallas were openly exultant when Rosabel Raymond was gone.

So dispiriting to have her around al the time, with her swollen eyelids and pale face !' said Miss Augusta.

'And so shabby as she looked too! said Mrs. Dallas. And how on earth was I to provide her with a wardrobe, when papa made such a dreadful fuss over every dress that came home from Madame Ficelle's for my own girls?

'Of all things poor relations are the most intolerable!' said Medora spitefully.

'But what are we to say if Mr. Ballard asks after her?' blurted out Bell. the most honest and least polite of the family. 'Say? Why, the truth! declared Medora. 'That she has left us!' For the secret of Miss Medora Dallas' anxiety to get rid of her pale little cousin, whose mourning was so distressingly becoming to her, was the fact of Mr. Hugh Ballard's admiration of the white, statuesque face, the deep larkspur-blue eyes, and the features which were as perfect as any cameo. Miss Medora had marked Mr. Ballard for her own prey, and declared war upon any unfortunate pretender who should ly. come in her way.

'Perhaps,' said Mrs. Dallas, hopefully, 'he'll never inquire about her at all.' 'Don't you believe it,' said Bell, with a significant nod.

Bell was right. The very first evening that Mr. Ballard called he inquired for Miss Raymond. Medora drooped her long lashes.

'Rosabel had a cold reserved nature,' she said. 'She never seemed to become fond of any of us, and she has gone

'Gone where?' Mr. Ballard was per- | cards when we are finally settled!' sistent enough to ask.

'She said she would write and send us the address,' said Medora, drawing on her imagination; 'but she never did. It quite went to her dear mamma's heart. Mamma regarded Rosabel as a fourth daughter. But Rosabel never was inclined to reciprocate our affection.'

Mr. Ballard glanced at Medora with Graves. an expression which she could not interpret, but it meant simply : 'If this girl is lying, she's doing it very artistically. Appearances are certainly against Rosabel Raymond; but it would take more than the testimony of one woman to make me believe her either cold or ungrateful.'

These reflections passed through his mind as he was politely accepting Miss Dallas' invitation to accompany her to Mrs. Withworth Walkingham's musical tea the next day.

'It will be a bore,' he said to himself; but Mrs. Whitworth Walkingham is a genius, and there will be sure to be good music there.' There was good music there and also delicions 'Orange Pekoe' in the tiniest of cups, each painted with a separate wild flower or bunch of grasses; cake, ices and white grapes following the barcarolas and rondolettes-and all fortunate elbow knocked one of the pervision of the drawings, removes this SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

'Mrs. Whitworth Walkingham will commit suicide!' cried Medora, claspieg her hands with stimulated terror. 'I swear you to eternal secreey !' said Mr. Ballard, laughing, as he wrapped the precious pieces in his pocket handserchief and disposed them safely in his pocket. 'If there is a store in New York, Brooklyn, or Jersey City where this precious toy can be matched it shall not be left uns arched. For every one, Mr. Ballard included.

Dallas. And she proved to be right.

In his despair Hugh Ballard went to old Mrs. Megarreau, who was exactly like everybody's fairy godmother. 'What am I to do?' said he blankly.

'Do?' said Mrs. Megarreau, nodding the diamond butterflies on her cap. Why, go to the china-painting and decorating rooms, of course, in Hammersley Square. Take your sample and they'll duplicate it for you in twentyfour hours. Say that Mrs. Megarreau sent you.

Mr. Ballard devoutly thanked the old lady and obeyed without loss of

It was a huge, airy room, with the windows all glorified with winter sunshine, and a soft steam-heat modifying the rigor of the February air, where half a dozen young women were working at a large table. Mrs. Baker, the superintendent, who sat at her desk, took the pieces of Mrs. Whitworth Walkingham's doomed cup and looked earnestly at thom with her head on one

And Rosabel Raymond, pale and pretty as ever, came unconsciously forward in her brown linen painting dress, with a bow of black ribbon at her throat, and her lovely chestnut-brown hair pushed back from her face. Mrs. Baker was holding out the bits of fractured china, whereon were painted the blue iris buds and drooping grasses, but Rosabel never looked at them. 'Mr. Ballard !' she criec, her face brightening with a delight which she was too unsophisticated to repress, 'what brought you to this place?'

Miss Raymond, he exclaimed, 'what are you doing here?' 'Earning my own living,' said Rosabel, with quiet dignity.

'Does Miss Dallas-Medora, I mean -know where you are?' She ought to know,' said Rosabel, for it was she who recommended me to come here. For the Dallases, I think, were getting tired of me,' she added with a sigh. 'But I ought to be very much obliged to her, for I have acquired a most welcome independence and the work here is exceedingly congenial to my tastes. Is that the pattern you wished copied, Mrs. Baker? she asked taking a piece of china. 'Oh am bold enough to think I can imitate successfully. 'If you can replace that cup,' said Mr. Ballard dramatically. 'I am your

'I think I can promise to replace it without any such condition,' said Rosabel, laughing.

And Mrs. Whitworth Walkingham never knew that her iris-bud cup was broken until Hugh Ballard brought back its exact counterpart. 'You must have some spell out of the Arabian nights,' said she, enthusiasti-

'No,' he answered, quietly, 'no spell stronger than a woman's practiced eye and skilful hand.'

He came no more to Mrs. Dallas, Tuesday morning receptions and Friday afternoon teas. Miss Medora wondered vainly why. But one day she met him on Fifth avenue, and prettily reproached him for his absenteeism. 'I have been fortunate enough to discover the abiding-place of your consin, Miss Rosabel Raymond,' said he, grave-

Medora looked up, with a deep color mounting to her cheek. 'Indeed,' said she. 'It was very kind of you to secure for her such a congenial position as that,' he added Medora Dallas hung her head and

'But she will not remain there long,' he continued, cheerfully. 'I am happy tell you that I am engaged to her. We are to be married in a few weeks. Of course you will receive at 'home, Medora murmured something about 'congratulations' and 'delighted to hear of it.' But Mr. Ballard smiled to himself when she had passed on.

'La belle cousine is not exactly pleased, he said to himself. 'But what need I care for the frowns or smiles of other women, so long as I have won my little Rosabel ?'- Helen Forest

To Promulgate the Truth.

The way to get a thing believed by the public at large is to first have a truth to announce without any doubt or suspicion as to its being the truth, and then to keep on telling by speech and pen, by type and figure, in every way repeating it constantly. Thus it was that when The Louisiana State Lottery was incorporated in 1868 at New Orleans, for charitable educational purposes, there was a doubt that the managers would act as went merry as a marriage bell, until, in fairly as they announced, but the fact druggists have it or can get it for you. or it will be ent to any address on receipt of price by the turning to place a chair nearer the window for Miss Dallas, Mr. Ballard's un

THE REASON WHY .- Mr. Fellows, in his "Medical Monthly," gives reason for the peculiar action of his Hypophosphites in the cure of diseases, which seem to be borne out by facts. The manufacturers of it have a settled belief that the public cannot be misled on this point, and that any tampering with the quality of the brand would be monetary loss to them. Children and persons with weak constitutions have always found great diffi culty in taking Cod Liver Oil, and from this fact it has not deen universally used, but with Northrop & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, this prejudice is removed. It is so thoroughly disguised that you cannot detect the Cod Liver Oil. One physician writes us that it is used almost as a beverage in his family; another person informs us that he had to hide the bottle from the children.
