Nov. 21st. The Bohemian Oh, I'm the bold jayhawk of the press,

The newspaper man of the day, And, whenever I settle down on a place, Its citizens wish me away. I'm just the style of lad, you know, To make a decided hit; Of religion or principle neither I have, So in any place I will fit.

I'm up for sale, or to reut, or to let, And as loose as ashes I am, I'll go out by the day, or the month, or the year —Ain't I a most wonderful man? They've called me a jackal, bohemian and knave, A whining and cringing tool, But I care not who hates me, so long as I'm paid, As I'm anything but a fool.

One nice set of men pay me truly and well, As the editor of a small sheet And I smiled when I caught them so slick for Ere the grand bounce I could get for the street Meantime, I've nice pickings as special round For papers of every degree, And I dead-head on railways and at the hotels Whenever such pastime suits me.

My paper is printed alone for the mob, So I dish up the stuff that they like, I'm vulgar, abusive and call people names, For I know I'm too dirty to strike. If I hear people talking I hang round to hear What they're saying, and then take it down, And next thing they know they get it all out In my paper that's sold round the town. Then, the stuff that I publish I dish up again In my letters to papers away; Though there's little of truth in the trash that

All I care for, you know, is the pay. But 1 don't stop long in any one place, I'm just a bohemian, you know, A kind of a gutter-snipe grown to a man— A cross 'twixt a jackal and crow.

AMONG THE WARMEST ADVOCATES of the use of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure are ladies formerly in delicate health, whose vigor and bodily regularity have been restored by it. A World of Good.

One of the most popular medicines now before the American public, is Hop Bitters. You see it everywhere. People take it with good effect. It builds them up. It is not as pleasant to the taste as some other Bitters, as it is not a whiskey drink. It is more like the old-fashioned bone-set tea, that has done a world of good. A Good Reform. Children are not often tortured now-adays with bitter Aloes, Brimstone, Treacle, and the many nauseous remedies of the olden times.
