LETTER FROM A CANADIAN—THEIR EXPERIENCES IN EGYPT—TRAVELLING BY RAIL AND BY WATER—THE NATIVES MINUS MODERN MACHINERY—WATER-DRINKING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

(Correspondence of the Peterborough, Ont. Review.)

CANADIAN CONTINGENT NILE EXPEDITION, KENNAH, EGYPT, Oct. 15, 1884.

The city of Assiont is quite a large place, enclosed with a wall of brick made of mud and straw. In rambling through the streets, ones mind would revert to the days of short clothes or incipient knickerbockers, when the "Arabian Nights," with its magical descriptions, held us spell-bound.

Little I thought during my cribhood that I ever should view almost literally the descriptions of that wonderful book.

The streets are narrow and crooked—the upper stories projecting over those below—no sidewalks—but the high buildings with their overhanging balconies keep the streets pretty cool, as they shut out the sun to a great extent. But the bazaar was the place we sought, and we found it, or rather them, for there seemed to be many, swarming absolutely with men, women, children, dervishes, beggars, camels, horses, asses and some oxen, the latter and the camels generally carrying enormous loads.

Such screaming and yelling and jawing and, if I could understand, I suppose, swearing too—every moment you would imagine the natives were going to get into each others wool (if they have any) and we were always in expectancy of a free fight, and a repetition of the glories of the far famed Donnybrook Fair. On one side were tradesmen sitting, or rather squatting, on bits of rugs or carpets, plying their occupations—some shoemaking, some tailoring, some vending their wares, in little stalls that you would imagine a ten dollar bill would clean out. One wizened looking old parchment faced fellow, a scribe, attracted my attention. He was sitting cross-legged on a mat in front of a door, reading from a long scroll to a most attentive audience of five or six. I assure you he was quite a subject for an artist. The bazaar is not unlike an American arcade, and at evrey step you are solicited to buy their wares. Of course, being ignorant of their lingo, we could not do much in the purchasing line, but after all managed to supply our wants. Many of the Egyptians are very fine, noble looking specimens of humanity, straight as an arrow, broad chested, square shouldered and erect in carriage. They are the finest developed men in chest and shoulder I ever saw. You would not meet a man in a day's travel (old or young) with a stoop, but their legs are very spindly. Most picturesque indeed is the dress of the better class and merchants, but that of the labourers or fellaheen is something less than scant and more than ragged, and in fact many that I saw were all but stark naked.

We had no time to visit the Mosque for the steamer Beherak and her iron scows were loaded and at one o'clock we started up the famous Nile. Dirty Nile it should be named, for its waters are just the color of Peterborough mud puddles after a heavy rainstorm and much thicker.

You know the story of Babel and the confusion of tongues, well if you were here with me you would be right into it.

The coolies loading and yelling all the time, the fruit venders screaming out the nature of their stock in trade, our men, French, Indian, English, Irish, Scotch and. Canadians all haggling, squabbling and swearing in their respective patois. I tell you it set my poor head in a whirl. If the threatened Gehenna to evil doers is anything like this (maybe it's worse) I'll keep away from it for certain.

The laborers are free men, I think, yet the overseers thrash them with a will if they are slinking or if they make any mistakes. I saw a diminutive white commissry lambasting a native that stood about six foot four, a fellow big enough to crush the very life out of the little miserable atom of humanity, if he had only the pluck, but the great slabsided hulking coward ran away even as a little child would. It made me grind my teeth with rage to see the little white crab so brutal and the Egyptian giant so cowardly.

We left Assiont or Sioot after 2 p.m. with a tow of two iron scows and a Nile boat. The river runs about five or six miles an hour, and the steamer tacks from one side to the other like a sailing vessel working against the wind. She had to do this to take advantage of the slack water and keep as much as possible out of the current. About a dozen of the men were left behind, but they hired a small steamer and caught up to us in the evening.

At sun down we moved along the shore and then the fun commenced. All hands striving to secure a place on which to lay their weary bones. Soon every available spot was filled and some had to take to the roof and some to the shore for a resting place.

The steamer and scows are not much larger than Peterborough can boast of and sleeping room for 380 of our men, a commissary or transport corps, or part of one, all the native boatsmen and all officers of the C. T. Corps and our own being necessary, you may imagine what a pickle we were in.

Oct. 10.—After breakfast ammunition boots were served out to us all. They are a laced boot, heavy, sewed and pegged, with an iron shoe on the heel, but they fit well and are really good.

About 11 o'clock p. m. one of the Manitoba men took sick and could not get to the steamer, when the doctor was called. The natives would not let our men have the boat which was astern of the coal boat, but some of the boys stripped and swam back to it, put the sick man in it, and pulled to the steamer, where they left him in the doctor's care. (He was all right the next day.)

Oct. 11.—At noon the steamer stopped at the town of Girgeh. We were allowed to go ashore. A canal divided the main part of this place from the bank where we landed and we crossed by a ferry—no material difference between it and Sioot, only not so extensive. We went to the bazaar and bought a few necessaries. Some of us were invited to enter the palace of one of the big bugs of the town. We were ushered through great iron gates across a fine paved court (into which all the windows faced), then into a large room with raised divans. Silent blacks served us with cigarettes and cups of coffee, about a tablespoonful in each. We chatted in a sort of mixtherum gatherum, bowed, smiled, smoked and, shaking hands with our host, who was certainly most courteous and gentlemanlike in demeanor, departed on our way rejoicing.

As we neared the ferry quite a row was going on. Some of our men had no money and more that had would not pay and the ferryman would not take them over without pay. Some of the roughs threw the ferry man into the canal, took possession of the boat and ferryed the lads over. Some were decent enough to pay, but more were better pleased to act the "dead beat." Leave at 4 and moore by shore all night.

Oct. 12.—This morning the current is very strong and we do not make more than four miles an hour. At noon we coasted along beneath great cliffs of white rock which form the walls of the Nile Valley here and average from 300 to 600 feet in height. The valley seems about 10 miles wide and is walled in on both sides by these cliffs. We passed close enough in some places to see the natives quarrying the white stone and we could also notice many great caves cut in the face of the rock.

Every available spot in the valley seems cultivated and every few yards natives are dipping water into the irrigating drains—I will try and explain how it is done: They build two posts (at the end of the bank) with mud and corn stalks, on them is placed a cross stick and directly across this piece is swung a pole 15 or 20 feet in length, one end of which is weighted with a great lump of clay, and at the other end is a pendant rod with a skin bucket shaped like a bowl with a wooden rim attached to it. They pull on the rod until the bucket dips into the water, then the weight at the other end aids them in raising it well filled to the trough of the drain. Another method is by fastening earthen jars rather narrow at the neck to the rim of a large wheel worked by oxen, and as the wheel revolves the jars are filled beneath and emptied into the trough above. There appears to be thousands of men employed at this work, and scattered along the sides of the river every few yards are one or other of these rude machines—though the wheel is not unlike our elevators in Canada.

We ran short of tea and coffee to-day—our food, hard tack and canned meat, washed down with Nile water. We have only three great earthen filters and they cannot supply the fifth of the water we need—so many of the boys filter the water through their felt hats, they are just as good filters as the earthen ones, and far quicker. Landed last night on the eastern side of the river, and opposite to a city whose name I could not manage, it was a tooth shaker. As the sun set the city seemed stamped in relief against a lovely sky, delicately yellow, shaded partly by violet clouds tinged with the faintest coloring of sage green just where the yellow and the violet blended, and towards the south a leaden gray coloured mass with other colouring so merged and mixed, with the tall domes and minarets outlined against the beautiful back ground of a many coloured sky, the whole stealing down as it were to the water's edge where the faint lines of innumerable Nile boats lie with their tall slender masts and the pale twinkling lights from the buildings along the shore; all this makes such a delicious picture that my mind will dwell on it with thankfulness for many a long hour.

The men soon were on shore. Some amused themselves by bathing and visiting the villages near, and others before the sun set made for the mountains, a mile or so away, and not a few, I am sorry to say, to steal melons from the poor natives. When night fell all turned up except one from our gang named Condon. He had been seen near the top of the mountain at dusk, and fears were entertained that he would never be able to get down again in the dark. But just as a party was forming to search for him two Arabs brought him in. Shots had been heard earlier in the evening in the direction of a melon patch, and next day it was rumoured that a native had been shot. All I could learn was that while some of our fellows were stealing melons the natives attacked them, and one was struck on the back with a hoe, and while struggling in the grasp of three or four his companion fired at one of the peasants who fell.

The Colonel says if there is any truth in the report he will hear of it when we reach Assouan, and he will hand the men over to the military authorities. But if I give you no surer information before you publish this, you must not place too much dependence on what is as yet only a report.

October 14.—At 10 a. m. we were so close to the shore that we could jump off and visit the town of Abhamad, but as it is much of a muchness with all the other towns I did not think it would pay.

All the women I have seen as yet are tatooed on forehead and chin, and are not so good looking as the men, but I have seen a good many who keep their faces covered, and I fancy that they are one of two extremes, the beautiful and repulsive. In the former, modesty or bashfulness will account for the mask; if the latter, if their faces are ugly and hard looking, maybe their hearts are soft, and they don't like to uncover lest they frighten us to death.

The native Nile boats are built with square stern and very high and pointed prow. They have masts from 20 to 30 feet in height, with a great yard or boom attached to the top of the mast, at an angle of about forty degrees, and to this is attached a great triangular sail. These boats are very speedy and carry great loads.

Oct 14, 10 a. m.—We passed the city of Amadie, built close to the side of the river. The tops of the buildingsare perforated, and twigs built into the walls for the use of colonies of doves, which attach themselves to every town.

We have passed several large potteries to-day, their tall chimney shafts and neat buildings built of good white brick reminding one of home. All goods are shipped here either on Nile boats or on camels, which latter carry enormous loads—enough, one would think, for a good team to draw.

To-day we have taken turn about at grinding our coffee, which operation is performed with the aid of an iron pot and a hard stick. We roast the beans in the lid of the pot.

We have a sort of swing hung from the side of the scow, to which we hang and trail in the water as a substitute for a swim, but it takes no small amount of muscle to hold on, for the river here runs about 7 miles an hour and the boats between four and five.

They have the same primitive tools for cultivating the land that were in use 4,000 years ago, and it seems a miracle to me how they ever manage to get work done sufficient or shapely enough to raise crops.

Passed the night on a sandy shore. Some of the lads raised a howl that some animal was running over them, but it was only rats—pleasant for them. One of ours,named Lackie, and myself, have rigged a sort of hammock under the roof of the scow with our tump lines and sleeping mats and are better off than the rest. It is not a very comfortable resting place. It is too short by a foot and high at the head and heels, but it is better than being tramped on by men and run over by rats at night time.

Oct. 15.—Stopped near the town of Kermeh for seven hours, where the steamer coals. Spend the time in swimming and trading with the natives for melons and other kinds of fruit and earthen drinking jars, which keep the water we filter through our hats quite cool. The natives take anything in trade—empty meat tins, tobacco, old boots, shirts, knives and many things which, though useless to us, are useful to them. They are great cheats though and generally get the better of our fellows in some way.

October 16.—Land this evening at Luxor (the ancient Thebes) in the province of Karnak. It was near dark when we landed, and we explored the ruins chiefly with the aid of lanterns, but I have neither time or space to describe them in this letter. I could not post my letter there as all my money was gone, and we have not received any pay as yet, though it is said we will get paid at Assouan. We are now 8 days on the river and have barely four days rations on board, but we expect they will last until we reach Assouan. The distance from Assiout, where we took the river, to Assouan, is 350 miles, only think of taking 12 days for such a distance!

I must close now for the present, so good-bye for a day or two.

The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as it is certain in its effects and does not blister. READ PROOF BELOW.

Saved Him 1,800 Dollars!

ADAMS, N. Y., Jan. 30. 1882.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. Two years ago I had as speedy a colt as was ever raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs all to pieces. I employed the best farriers, but they all said he was spoiled. He had a very large thorough-pin, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bunch entirely of, and he sold afterwards for $1800 (dollars.) I have used it for bone spavins and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left the leg smooth.

It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. I have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Witherington & Kneeland's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it, but could not; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I wish you would, and I will do you all the good I can.

Very respectfully, E. S LYMAN.

From the Akron Commercial, Ohio, of Nov. 25th, 1882.

Readers of the Commercial can not well forge that a large space has for years been taken up by Kendall's advertisements—especially of a certain Spavin Cure. We have had dealings with Dr. Kendall for many years, and we know of some large business houses in cities near by who have also dealt with him for many years, and the truth is fully and faithfully proven, not only that he is a good honest man, and that his celebrated Spavin Cure is not only all that it is recommended to be, but that the English Language is not capable of recommending it too highly.

Kendall's Spavin Cure will cure spavins. There are hundreds of cases in which that has been proven to our certain knowledge, but, after all, if any person confines the usefulness of this celebrated medicine to curing spavins alone, they make a big mistake. It is the best medicine known as an outward application for rheumatism in the human family. It is good for pains and aches, swellings, lameness, and is just as safely applied to men, women and children as it is to horses. We know that there are other good liniments, but we do believe this spavin cure to be far better than any ever invented.

Kendall's Spavin Cure.

Hutchinson's Ranch, 12 miles north of Denver, Col. Mar. 5th, 1883.

DR. B. J. KENDALL, & Co., Gents:—For the past three years I have used Kendall's Spavin Cure. In every case of spavin, of which I have treated five, it has killed them all, and entirely removed three. In case of splint I find it has no equal, one case I had was of three years standing and the Spavin Cure removed it entirely. I had a cow get spavined and it entirely cured her. One year ago a two hundred pound block of ice fell out of a wagon striking my foot on instep and toes, it would be impossible to mash a foot worse without breaking any bones. I was taken home and carried into the house. I do not think amputation of the leg would cause any more pain. I sent for Kendall's Spavin Cure, it was all I used, and in six days I could walk around. About three weeks ago my team ran away and threw me out of the wagon, the hind wheel struck my knee. After applying several highly recommended liniments without obtaining any relief, I went for Kendall's Spavin Cure. My leg was drawn up and my knee swollen badly. In three days I was able to walk to the barn. I could go into details more fully and make this a very long letter, but will not weary you.

I am very respectfully yours,
OSCAR F. HUTCHINSON.

KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Santa Rosa, Cal., Feb. 9th, 1883.

B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents:—I feel it a duty to others suffering with the piles and falling of the rectum to write you. I have had the piles and prolapsus of the rectum for five years, for the past three years I have suffered the most agonizing pain. Tried everything without relief, but after ten days use of Kendall's Spavin Cure I have not seen nor heard of the piles since. One who has not suffered as I have cannot comprehend the great joy that I feel at being cured of a disease almost worse than death. I had a valuable young horse that had a large bunch gather on his breast bone. I tried all kinds of liniments and had it cut open without any benefit. Saw your advertisement and bought a bottle of Kendall's Spavin Cure and ordered my teamster to use as directed. In less than one week the lump had disappeared.—Thinking that a liniment that would do what Kendall's Spavin Cure has done for my horse might benefit more. I tried it as a last resort.

With gratitude and best wishes for your success, I am faithfully yours,

J. H. GLENN.
