A DOCTOR'S RUSE.

Mark C

HOW HE CURED A PATIENT AND SECURED A WIFE,

Dr Paul Ventnor sat alone in his office, his hands crossed on his knees, his eyes; fixed upon vacancy. Someone pulled the bell. He opened the door and a lady entered. She was closely veiled.

'What is his malady?' asked the doc-

'He has a strange hallucination concerning his food, 'she slowly replied. 'For days at a time nothing liquid passes his lips. He fancies the water to be filled with the finest of needles. 'Give me your address. I'll call tomorrow. She handed him a card upon which was printed: G. B. Branson. He said 'It may be best for me not to call a Physician. Could I not come upon some pretended business of a kind in which he takes an interest?'

'He has houses to rent on Brandywine street,' she said, after a pause-'to rent and to sell.'

'Very good' rejoined the doctor, 'that will serve me. Now, Miss Branson, you must not be surprised if I cut up some queer antics.' He laughed as he said that. 'Watch me closely for a clew to what I would have you do or

'I think I understand,' she simply said. 'Good evening, sir.'

The next morning Doctor Paul Ventnor took from a drawer a strong horse shoe magnet. He rubbed steadily upon the blades of his pocket-knife with one of the poles of the magnet, thoroughly electrifying it. He purchased a paper store, then set out for the residence of his patient.

He found the latter to be a man we advanced in life, intelligent and genial -so genial, in fact, that the doctor wondered at there being so much of the suspectful in his nature. The doctor at once opened a conversation about the houses on Brandwine street, in which Mr. Branson earnestly joined, and vividly explained points in the speculation.

'Sir, could I trouble you for a drink of water?' the doctor suddenly asked 'Certainly,' replied the other, 'Kate please bring Mr.

'Ventnor,' supplied the doctor. 'A glass of water, ' completed Mr.

He was addressing his daughter, who FURS! had called upon the doctor the evening before, and she was seated in one of the bay windows. She put aside her book, left the room, and returned with a glass of water, which the doctor accepted with a bow.

He raised the glass to his lips, and then a well-feigned look of astonishment crossed his face. He ejected some of the water, plucked at his moustache, then strode to the window, where he seemed absorbed in an examination of the contents of the glass.

in? Why did she bring me such stuff as this ?'

He took out his knife, thrust into the magnetized blade, and when he withdrew it a number of needles were adhering to it, for he had adroitly dropped them into the water.

'Who filled this glass?' he asked.

'Richard,' replied Miss Branson. ' Who is Richard?' asked the doctor ' A domestic.'

'Send him here at once,' peremptorily ordered the doctor. The servant came into the room, preceded by Miss Branson. ' Did you fill this glass with water, the doctor sharply asked.

'Yes, sah,' answered the mulatto, a harmless looking fellow, with high cheek bones and watery eyes.

'Did you drop any needles into it?' 'Golly, no !' exclaimed the man.

'Dar's no needles in it. It's an old cranky notion of Mr. Branson's. He keeps us all on edge about it.' 'Oh, he does, eh?' frowned the doc.

tor. Well, it is no fancy. 'Dar's no needles in the water.' declared the man. thrust his magnetized knife-blade into the glass. 'What are these, pray?' in versed for an hour upon various topics. The old gentleman was wonderfully pleased with him, and cordial in his invitation to him to call again.

Miss Branson accompanied the doctor to the door.

'Your father is cured,' he said. 'Do you think so?' she asked, her handsome eyes on his face. 'We will wait a week. That was an admirable ruse. Take this, please; it is simply a remembrance.

A roll of something was placed in his hand.

'Thank you,' he gratefully said. 'You were rather hard on Richard, reminded Miss Branson, with a smile. 'I wronged him, 'admitted the doctor. 'But I had to assail some one. Can you explain the matter to him, and procure a situation elsewhere?'

'I will try,' she replied. The doctor bowed and then hurried back to his office. At the end of the week he received a second voluntary fee from his fair friend.

He became a frequent visitor at the house of Mr. Branson, and finally married the fair, dark-eyed young girl who had brought him his first case.
