CHICKEN CHOLERA, Circulars free. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Little Shippegan, charging him with having, at Little Shippegan Post Office, taken, kept and detained a post letter addressed to Peter J. Leslie. L. R. Harrison, Esq., Deputy Minister of Justice, and Theops. DesBrisay, Esq., attended on behalf of the Crown. The complaint of Mrs. Hammond was first proceeded with. The complaint be.

ing read over, Sheriff Doucet did not appear in obedience to summons, and a warrant was issued on application of Mr. Adjourned until 3.30 p. m.

Court resumed. Mr. Narcisse Landry appears for Deft. and moves for discharge of prisoner on the following grounds,-1st. That no place was named in the summons for his appearance this morning. 2nd. If a place was named the Sheriff was present and could. therefore, not be brought under warrant.

Overruled.

Mrs. Annie Hammond, sworn, saith,am a married woman, wife of Thomas Hammond; am Postmistress at Shippegan since 1st Feb'y, 1879; have P. J. Leslie, Little Shippegan, out of a acted in that capacity ever since; know Sheriff Doucet. On Friday afternoon, 7th Sept., 1883, between 4 and 6 o'clock, two gentlemen, Mr. Doucet and Mr. Narcisse A. Landry, came to the office, which is the Telegraph and Post Office, both, and one asked if there was any despatch for N. A. Landry. There being one I handed it to him. Mr. Doucet then asked me if there were any registered letters for P. J. Le lie, Little Shippegan. Seeing it was the Sheriff, I hesitated and said "the letters for Little Shippegan are not delivered at this office; they only pass through it to Alexandre's Point for Little Shippegan." The Sheriff replied, "He knew that, but the letter he was looking for had not left my office, it only came last night." He said is was a registered letter addressed to P. J. Leslie, Little Shippegan. I asked him how he got his information and he said that was none of my business, that was his business. He then said he was the Sheriff and that he wanted that letter. I understood he wanted to seize it. He said the the safe. I asked him where was his pecket and laid it on the table and said that was his authority. I think he said letter in this paper-that it said levy of the goods and chattels of Peter J. Leslie, etc. The Sheriff then said that letters and all such papers were comprised under the heading of goods and chattels. I told him I did not think such was the case. I do not think I told him in as many words I was Postmistress, but I presumed he was talking to me in that capacity. I said I did not think the Sheriff could come in and take anything out of the Post Office; that there would be no protection to any one if that were so. I told him this was the Postmaster General's property. Sheriff then said he would not eave the office till he got the letter and repeated what he said about searching. right and said that before he would make any search to wait until I would telegraph Inspector McMillan for instructions. made no reply but remained in the office. I telegraphed and Sheriff Doucet asked how long before I would get a reply. said I did not know, but would tell operator to use all dispatch. I got no reply that evening. I waited several hours for one and none came. Both gentlemen staid all the time. I asked them into my sitting room while we were waiting for a reply. I told the Sheriff I felt badly about his coming to the office, knowing a woman was in charge; that if he had a right to take the letter he should have brought me some authority to satisfy me. Mr. Landry and he went aside in a passage and spoke a few words in an undertone. Mr. Doucet then said to me, "I do not want you to feel that I am taking any undue advantage of you because you are woman, but you telegraph the Attorney General and ask him if I have not a right." I replied I was not under obedience to the Attorney General; that if the Attorney General did tell him he had a right I would not give him the letter; that I was under obedience from the P. O. Department; that if they wanted any advice from the Att'v General I would send their despatch as operator-that I wanted none. They both stayed till 8 p. m. The Sheriff said I was giving a great deal of unnecessary delay; that if I were a man he would have the letter long ago; that if McMillan had been here he would have had it without trouble. The Sheriff then came out into the office and took some books off the telegraph table into the sitting room, where I had lighted a lamp, and looked through them. Isaid they were the telegraph office books and he looked through them and laid them down again, He said the registered letters were kept in these books in Bathurst. He then came to the P. O. table and took three or four books off it and Mr. Landry took the lamp from the sitting room table and brought it out and laid it on the Post Office table near the Sheriff. while he examined the Post Office books. told the Sheriff he had no right to inspect and after making more resistance the those books. The Sheriff then opened a Sheriff wrenched the bag from me. He drawer in the Post Office table and looked through it, passing his hands through the near the window and looked through the ordinary way to-morrow morning to Alexandre's Point. He then asked what ime the mail left for Alexandre's Point. I said about seven thirty in the morning. He said I might make away with the letter out of my office in the meantime. I think I said I had no interest in making away with the letter, that I would not pay $4 for a special to take Leslie's letter. Both gentlemen then left. About seven the next morning I was assorting the mail and I heard a knock at the front door. I looked out of the window, and saw Mr. Landry in front of the window. I did not see the Sheriff. The door was not opened to the knock. Sheriff Doucet then came around by the kitchen door and came into the office. I was then sorting the mail that had arrived during the night. There were bags from Caraquet and Bathurst. He bade me good morning and asked me if I had changed my mind on the matter of last night. I said I had not: I was still of the same opinion. He said neither have I, so we are both pretty obstinate. He then sat down on a chair in the Post Office. I continued sorting the mail and made up the bags for Alexandre's Point, Little Shippegan and Miscou. After I had made up and closed one Post Office bag for Alexandre's Point, in which were the letters for Little Shippegan, the Sheriff said he should see the contents of that bag, referring to the one I had closed up. I said he would not, and held on to the bag. The Sheriff took hold of the bag and we both had hold of it. He tried to take the bag and said the fact of it is Mrs. I have had legal advice on this matter. and he took the bag from me. I resisted all I could, trying to hold the bag. The Sheriff took the bag and opened it. He cut the twine that tied it and looked through the contents of it. I got vexed and threw the bags on the floor and went out into the adjoining room, and said to him as he had done that he might take charge. I sat in the doorway where I could see him and he had the bag on the telegraph table and going through the contents of it. He said "I have taken three letters and a paper addressed to Leslie"-I understood, P. J. Leslie, of Little Shippegan. He showed me the letters and paper. Sheriff Doucet took three letters and a paper addressed to Post Office bag I had made up. He then said, "But I have not got the valuable letter." He put back the remaining letters and papers in the bag and laid it on the Post Office table, and kept the three letters. Meantime, I made up a bag for

Cross-examined by N. A. Landry-It is about seven months and a day since this took place. I think I have not spoken very much about the matter. The circumstances are as fresh in my mind today as they were then, but perhaps the conversations are not so fresh. The substance of the conversation is fresh in my mind. It is on account of my good memory. I have given the facts and conversations truly and wholly as far as I remember. It would be impossible for me letter was in my office and he would have to give all that was said between five and it; he would seach for it and break open | eight o'clock-you said-"I hope Doucet you will get that letter as it will be a authority. He took a paper out of his feather in your eap"-(sensation!) I think you were talking to the Sheriff when you said it. When I told Doucet it was a writ. I read the paper. I said he had not the power to do this you said it did not say anything about a registered it had been proved in court that a letter once mailed was the property of the party to whom it was addressed - I said, yes, that was in my book of instructions but I did not interpret it that way, but that it was that a person who had mailed it could not take it back. I said I was under bonds for the property, and Doucet said he was under bonds also, and it was in that part of the conversation that you said "well now Doucet I hope you will succeed in getting this as it will be a feather in your cap"-this was in the sitting room. The very first question Doucet asked me was if there was a letter for P. J. Leslie, Little Shippəgan. I did not tell him the mail left for Little Shippegan on Monday but on Tuesday and Satur-I did not know but perhaps he had a day. I did not say in any part of the conversation that I had the letter. I never said anything to the effect that I was sorry I did not follow my first impression and send the letter down by special, or last courier as I could have The letter came into the office either Wednesdoy or Thursday night prior to the Sheriff's visit. Doucet was very gentlemanly on both occasions in his language. He did not say he had authority under executions to break open safes and that letters were not protected in the Post Offce and that he would have the same authority in reference to my safe. I had no safe. To the best of my knowledge Doucet said nothing about protection of letters to me. I took down the book of instructions and looked through it for the purpose of seeing if there was anything in it contrary to Doucet's contention that he had a right, under an execution, to take the letter, still I do not remember that he resumed. I wish to correct my evidence of yesterday in the statement that Doucet cut the string of the bag. I do not think the bag was actually tied and sealed, but I was in the act of tying and sealing it when Doucet took it out of my hand. I was making up the mail for Alexandre's Point, in which bag letters for Little Shippegan are sent. When the mail was made up and I was in the act of closing the bag, Doucet said he should see the contents of that bag before it was closed. The Sheriff had risen from the chair where he was seated before he said this and stood by me at the table where I was closing the bag. The Sheriff tried to take the bag from me. I held on to the bag while the Sheriff held on also, then took it from this table to a table contents. The contents were stamps, contents of it and took therefrom three cards and papers belonging to the Post letters and a paper addressed P. J. Leslie, Office Department.
