Raising Colts.

The main idea with some farmers is to get as many colts as possible—a colt is a with them-for the least outlay, They get hold of an old broken down mare, inheriting ailments and blemishes She still serves faithfully at the plow and harrow, where she cripples along under the combined influences of voice and lash. Her days of road service are over. Al she is good for now is to work on the land and raise colts. The neighborhood is searched for a stallion whose service will not cost over $3 or $5. He may be smart appearing beast, and on a par with the mare in pedigree. The farmer is satisfied, and only haggles a little as to price. This satisfactorily settled, the only anxiety is to see another head added to his drove. The colt is to be so much clear gain, so the mare's work must not be interrupted. She must use the harness right up to the ACCOM'DATION day of foaling, and of course she is not worthy of the extra food needed by brood mares. The colt, of necessity, partakes of the weakness and ill-condition of the mother; it fails to receive sufficient nourishment to increase the little vitality inherited; is weak and puny until old enough to get further nourishment than > the mother's milk. Such a colt, dropped, is worth no more than the service price of the stallion; when broken, it is not worth the fodder it has

amount is a dead loss.

These figures are moderate, I think, and do not include any risk, as they should. Now I can buy all the scrub colts of that age that my pasture will hold, for $75 each. There may be $27 worth of pleasure in raising such colts, otherwise the

I acknowledge there is an occasional colt from scrub stock that has extraordinary good qualities-is symmetrical in form, and active. The ambitious owner of such male colts usually raise them for breeders, that they may, for the rest of their lives, transmit weakness and disease to a new race of miserable brutes, at from $3 to $5 per head. Many a broken-down mare, if served with a thoroughbred stallion, and well used during her period of pregnancy, will foal a fine colt, and if well-fed, and worked but little during the summer, she will rear it in a thrifty condition. It costs no more to rear a good colt than a scrub. Let us think of this matter be-

It was perhaps big enough to be called a hog, but they termed it a pig, and as they turned it over to the care of the landlord at whose inn they proposed to rest for the night, one of men explained:

will weigh their pig and beat their game." Nobody slept until the pig was taken over to the scales and weighed. He pulldown 170 pounds to a hair, and the villagers went home and hunted up their nickels and dreamed of pigs and scales and sharpers through the remainder of the night. Next morning the pig was led around in front, and before starting off on his journey, one of the owners remarked to the assembled crowd:

"Gentlemen, I'm going to weigh this pig directly. Maybe some of you would like to guess on his weight? I'll take all guesses at 10 cents each, and whoever hita it gets 50 cents. "

This provoked a large and selected stock of winks and smiles, but no one walked up until the pig man said that any one person could guess as many times as he cared to, provided a dime accompanied each guess. Then a rush set in. Three or four merchants put up 50 guesses each. A lawyer said about twenty would do for him. Before there was any let-up in the guessing, about six hundred had been registered and paid for. Every soul of them guessed 170 pounds. It was curious what unanimity there was in the guessing, but the pig men didn't seem to notice it. When all had been given a chance, the pig was led to the scales, and lo ! his weight was exactly 1701 pounds. "You see, gentlemen, " explained the spokesman, " while this animal only weighs 170 pounds along about 11 o'clock at night, we feed him about five pounds of cornmeal in the morning before weighing! You forgot to take this matter into consideration!"

Then somebody kicked the landlord, and he kicked the justice, and the justice kicked a merchant, and when the pig men looked back from a distant hill, the whole town was out kicking itself and throwing empty wallets into the river.

THE TRUE PHILOSOPHY OF MEDICATION is not to dose for symptoms, but to root out disease. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, the Great Blood Purifier, has proved itself equal to this task. It is a most searching without being a violent remedy for Constipation, Biliousness and Indigestion. It is as well adapted to the needs and physical temperaments of delicate females as to the more robust sex, and is a fine preventive of disease as well as remedy
