MIRAMICHI ADVANCE, CHATHAM, NEW BRUNSWICK, AUGUST 28, 1884.

HOW I BECAME A FARMER.

It was getting dark. But through on toward it, though I had little hope Ah ! how discouraged, hungry and was torture. If I had had my choice to live or die, I honestly think I would have preferred the latter.

It was a low, small, one-story house, weather-beaten and dilapidated. Two of the front windows were boarded up, and the other two had half the glass panes broken out. Off to the left was a still more dilapidated barn, the great doors of which were propped up. Not only the yard fence, but all the fences. in sight, were shattered and falling down.

The place, as I saw at second glance, was uninhabited, and from the forest of tall, dry thistles before the house door. I judged that it had not been occupied for a long time. At least, I thought, I shall not be denied a night's lodging in the ground, I mended the fences here.

There was a fireplace in the rear the room, and after shouting to make sure that no one was about to object, built a prodigous fire, and going to the barn fetched in armfuls of old straw there and made a bed for myself.

I was hungry, yet still more tired and after a time I fell asleep.

In the spring of 1874, I was as home less and houseless as anybody in Boston. I was nineteen. My mother was dead and my father, a crippled sailor, was an inmate of a charitable institution.

The previous summer I had driven an ice-cart, and had saved enough to carry me partly through the winter. But could not get another job. If there anything in this world which will try one's soul, it is to hunt a job week after week and month after month, and

So, go ahead, Charles Ephraim ; plant and footsore I was that night ! Every step sow and reap to your heart's content this year ; and whenever you can raise the hundred and fifty, the old farm is yours.
