The Two Mrs. Tuckers.

WRITTEN FOR THE CONNECTICUT FARM ERS' CONVENTION AT WATERBURY.

BY ROSE TERRY COOKE. "I don't blame her none, anyway ' she sobbed out to the boy, now a stout fellow of twenty-two, raging at his sister's folly. "I don't feel to blame her; I know 'tis more'n a girl can bear to live this way. I've hed to, but it's been dreadful hard! I've wished more'n once I could be laid down along with the little babies out there on the hill, so's to rest a spell; but there was you and Lury wanted me, and so my time hadn't come. Amasy, you're a man grown now. If ever you should get married, and I s'pose you will. Men folks seem to think it's needful, whether or no, do kinder make it easy for her, poor creetur! Don't grind her down to skin and bone, like me, dear; 'taint just right, I'm sure on't, never to make no more of a woman than if she was a horned critter, and don't do it." "Mother, I never will?" answered the son, as energetically and solemnly as if he were taking his oath.

But Wealthy was nearer to her rest than she knew; the enemy that larks in dirt, neglect, poor food, constant drudgery, and the want of every wholesome and pleasurable excitement to mind and body, and when least expected swoops down and does its fatal errand in the isolated farm house, no less than in the crowded city slums, the scourge of New England-typhoid fever -broke out in the Tucker homestead.

Wealthy turned away from her baking one Saturday morning, just as the last pie was set on the broad pantry shelf, and fainted on the kitchen floor. where Amasa the younger found her an hour after, muttering, delirious and have been equally futile. She was about her once more; she locked up at her boy, laid her wan cheek on his hand, smiled-and died.

Hardly had her wasted shape been put away under the mullins and hardhack, when her husband came in from the hay-field smitten with some plague. He was harder to conquer; three weeks of alternate burning, sinking, raving and chills ended at last in the gray and grim repose of death for him, and another Amasa reigned alone in the old house on the hill.

It is not to be supposed that in all these years Amasa the younger had been blind to the charm of the other who went to school with him, or whom ing matches or who smiled at him from shy, delicate, dark-eyed little girl who | aged. was his girl sweetheart, and now it was savings of his father's fifty years. He affection. began at once to get his house in order; he longed to build a new one, but Mary's advice restrained him, so he did his best with this. The cellar he clear ed and white-washed with his own sweet and light; the house was scrubbed system. from one end to the other, bonfire made of the old dirty comfortables and quilts, the kitchen repainted a soft yellow, and new windows with clear large glass set in place of the dingy old sashes. The and a good store of pine cones and chopped brush for kindlings; a new milk room was built but a little way from the back door over a tiny brook that ran down the hill worth of the up a cool draught of fresh air, a covered passage connected it with the kitchen, and a door into the old milk-room made of that a convenient pantry, while the removal of the old one from the kitchen corner gave to that apartment more room, air and light. A new stove with a set boiler filled up the hearth of the old fire-place, but further improve- frail ments Amasa left to Mary. A different home-coming from his mother's she had, indeed, on just such a spring day as Wealthy came there. The kitchen shone clean and br ght, a bowl of pink arbutus blossoms made its atmosphere freshly sweet, and the fire was laid ready for her to light, the suggest-flour, butter, eggs, sugar, all were in abundance, and no feast of royalty ever gave more pleasure to its most honored guest than the hot biscuit Mary made and baked for their supper, the stewed dried apples the rich old cheese and the fragrant tea, gave Amasa on this happy evening. Next. day they took their wedding trip to Peet's Mills in the new and sensible farm wagon Amasa had just bought with a strong spirited horse to draw it. "I want you to look around, Mary," he had said the night before, "and see what is needful here. I expect almost everything is wanting, and we can't lay out for finery; but first of all get what will make your work easy. Your wedding present will come to-morrow; today we'll buy necessities." Mrs. Peet's had not sent her only girl empty-handed to the new home; a good mattress, two pair of blankets, fresh light comfortables, and some cheap, neat white spreads, a sett of gay crockery, a clock and a roll of bright ingrain carpeting had all come to the farm house soon after the bride's arrival. Her ample supply of sheets and pillow cases, strong towels and a few table cloths, had been sent the day before, so this sort of thing was not needed; but there was a new churn bought, and altogether new furnishing for the dairy, several modern inventions to make the work of a woman easier, a set of new chairs a table and an easy lounge for the parlor, some cre onne thorn clusters, and pails, brooms and D.M. FERRY & CO. WINDSOR.

tinware that would have made Wealthy a happy woman, crowded the over-full wagon before they turned homeward. The whole house began to smile and blossom under this new dispensation, and the new mistress smiled too. Amasa milked the cows for her, and lifted the heavy pails of milk to strain into the bright new pans; he filled the wood box by the stove twice a day, put a patent pump into the old well, and as it stood above the house ran a pipe down into a sink set in the woodshed, and so put an end to the drawing and

"You've got enough to do, Mary : there's the garden von'll have an eye on, and the chickens, if you're a mind to I'm going to build a hen-house and a yard to it right off, that'll be good enough for you as well as the chickens; and I want you to promise if any time the work gets a mite heavy and worries you, you'll speak right out. I can, afford to have everything worn out rather than my wife.'

Really it paid! It does pay, my masculme friends, to give any woman kindly word now and then; if you had done it oftener-or your fathers hadin the past, the Rights of Woman ney er would have angered or bored you as they do now; or unsexed and made strident and clamorous that half of creaion which is and always was upreason able enough to have hungry hearts. Try it and see.

Amasa was wise about his generation; he had seen his mother suffer and learned a lesson. Mary never pined for kindly appreciation of her work or help in it. When she had a door cut through into the parlor, the stiff chairs and sofa cold. What he could do then, or the | banished, the flowery curtains hung at village doctor, or an old woman who either window, the gay carpet put down called herself a nurse, was all useless. and the new furniture set in place But the best skill of any kind would with her wedding present-an easy stuffed rocker--drawn up to the table, on never conscious again for a week. which lay two weekly papers and a Then her eyes seemed to see what was [magazine, she had still sense enough left to make this hitherto sacred apartment into a real sitting room, where every evening she and Amasa rested, read or talked over the day's doings and when the first, fat, rosy baby came, and Mary was about again, it added another pleasure to have the old cradle beside them all the evening, with its sleeping treasure.

Can I tell in words what a sense of peace and cheer pervaded this household, in spite of some failures and troubles? If the rye did blast one year, the two best cows died another; if a weasel once invaded the new and 100 wonderful hen-house and slaughtered sex; he had not "been with" every girl the best dozen of Plymouth Rocks; if sweeping storms wet the great crop of he had met at singing schools or spell- hay on the big-meadow, or an ox broke its leg in a post-house, still there was her Sunday bonnet as he manfully home to come back to, and a sensible. PLEASANT WORM SYRUP. about Fifty per cent of all Children die before reaching the tenth year of life.

Many children suffer from day to day-freeful, cross and peevish -and the cause of the trouble is not suspected.

A pallid and sickly countenance, irregularity of tongue, great thirst, gradual emaciation, irritable temper, disposition to be picking the nose, are symptoms indicating the presence of WORMS ! It any of these symptoms are noticed, or the pre-Pleasant Worm Syrup, which costs but 25 ets, and give it according to directions. If any worms are present they will soon be expelled and your darling restored to health again. If there are no worms present the remedy will do no harm, but will move the bowels gently and leave the system in a healthy con ition.

PLEASANT WORM SYRUP requires no castor oil or other purgative medicine with it.
