

That Golden Curl.

Perry Dayton sat in his stuffy little office, busily glancing over a heap of letters which that morning's post had brought for the establishment of Messrs. Park & Haily. He came to one address in a peculiarly dainty feminine hand, and opened it with a little more curiosity than he had designed to bestow upon the others.

"Enclosed please find—invisible hair net—color of hair sent. Address Miss Ella Terrell, Oakhaven," etcetera.

Miss Ella Terrell has very lovely hair," thought the young man, examining the long curl attentively. It was golden brown, and shone radiantly in the beams of the sunlight which at that particular moment came pouring in at the little window. "Perhaps, though, it is not her own hair."

However he laid the letter and soft curl aside, resolving to match that invisible hair himself.

It was very strange, but a vision of a young lady with golden brown hair would keep intruding itself between his eyes and the remaining letters. Some-times brown eyes accompanied the hair, sometimes blue. Now it was a petite figure—again "divinely tall and most divinely fair."

Having skimmed over them all he betook himself to that compartment of the establishment devoted to such articles as the one required. Box after box he examined, and turned away dissatisfied. He began to despair. Here was the identical one at last. He carried it in triumph to the office and began to write:

"I have, my dear Miss Ella, at last found one to match your beautiful curl. I hope—"

"What wash I am writing! Why, Perry, old boy, you're clean gone!" he exclaimed, tossing the offending missive in the waste basket.

Enclosing the article in a wrapper, he addressed it, and laid it with similar parcels on a shelf, at the same time consigning the curl to his vest pocket.

"Of course you are aware, Mr. Dayton, that some one must go north shortly to attend to that business in Liverpool, and as we have found you faithful in the discharge of your duties, and place the utmost confidence in your judgment, Mr. Haily and myself have decided that you are the one to go."

Thus spoke the senior partner, coming into the office where Perry was sitting. This happened a few months later. Perry's beaming face fully expressed his appreciation of this mark of esteem.

He was to start in two days. This was Thursday. The next Wednesday morning found our friend taking breakfast at the Adelphi Hotel, Liverpool. The business would probably keep him there a month or so. He had plenty of leisure time, and devoted it to viewing the sights.

One evening he entered the office of a young fellow connected with the business house of Park & Haily, and found him making an elaborate toilette.

"Why this unusual and unnatural regard for thy appearance, O Trevelyn!" he exclaimed, advancing into the room where his friend stood.

"I am going to a party. Don't you want to come?"

"Yes. Where is it?"

"At Old Swan, four miles away. We will take a cab at eight precisely."

Trevelyn was well known and liked at Old Swan. He had lived there several years, and so it was that Perry was presented to some of the nicest people in the place.

He was talking with Mrs. Langdon when he discovered that Trevelyn was dancing with a very pretty young lady. She had dark eyes, and a small oval face, and was dressed in some airy, floating material. But her hair attracted his attention particularly. It reminded him of a curly lock which he had carried about for several months. And then she wore an invisible net, which was probably what caused him to remember that other lock.

"Don't you agree with me, Mr. Dayton?"

"Oh, yes, indeed!" he said, having not the slightest idea of what Mrs. Langdon was talking about.

The waltz came to an end at last, and the two found their way to where other friends were seated.

"Won't you introduce me to the fair dancer?" Dayton asked, at the earliest opportunity.

"Was Miss Terrell engaged for the next dance?" A glance at a dainty programme proved the contrary.

"Might he have the pleasure?"

"Yes."

What a delightful turn that was! Dayton had never enjoyed anything so much. He had some thought of telling Miss Terrell that a lock of that massy wavy hair was at that moment lodged in his pocket. A propitious fate permitted him to dance again with her during the evening and even to accompany their party to supper.

The next day Trevelyn and Dayton called to pay their respects at the Terrell mansion. And then Perry fell into the habit of going without Trevelyn. The week slipped away quietly, and at length Perry discovered that he was madly, wildly, hopelessly in love with the fair owner of the fatal net.

One day there was to be a picnic. Nature exerted herself to the utmost on this particular occasion. No one had ever experienced a more deliciously pure atmosphere. How fresh every thing looked! How sweetly the birds sang! A winding road through the trees led to just the sort of place they were looking for. Then came the bustle of alighting and collecting the baskets, and all sat down for a general chat before going off in exploring parties.

The delights of picnics were being warmly discussed, when a gray-cold gentleman on horseback was seen approaching the trees at one side.

He seemed in no wise disconcerted by numerous pairs of eyes bent upon him.

"Why, Reggy, where did you come from?" cried Miss Ella, prettily; while the pater d' mater shook him warmly by the hand.

I found myself able to be with you earlier than I expected. They told me you were all booked for the day, so I determined to follow suit.

"It is so nice that you happened to come on this particular day! We are going to have such a nice day!" said Mrs. Terrell.

"I'm not so sure of that," soliloquized Dayton, gloomily, remarking how pleasant Ella seemed at the advent of this stranger.

Mr. Dayton—Mr. Greydon, "came at last; and our friend found the keen, gray eyes giving him a searching look during the process of a graceful bow. I think Princess would thank me for a drink of water."

And Greydon proceeded to lead the handsome animal to the stream a few steps off.

Ella, exclaiming herself gracefully, accompanied Mr. Greydon.

Already daggers of jealousy seemed piercing Dayton's heart.

When is the wedding to come off?" he heard some one ask Mrs. Terrell.

"Then they are engaged! Why didn't some one tell me before I made such an utter fool of myself?" he groaned.

Every one thought this precise moment a suitable time for exploring tours, and separated into groups.

The poor fellow wandered off by himself, he did not care whether. His brain seemed on fire. He was desperately in love. Why had she always seemed so pleased to see him? He had thought so differently of her! What an idiot he was to go on loving the girl! One who could act so falsely was not worthy of his affection. These were some of his exciting thoughts.

He would go back. He would show her that this stranger's presence made not the slightest difference to him.

He turned hastily, and discovered that he had wandered some distance.

Arriving at the spot, he found Miss Ella, evidently much fatigued, alone.

He approached, and made a remark about the weather. Oh, commonplace young man!

"I was just wishing for some one to come, and had a vague idea that the nymph of the stream might venture to show herself if no one else appeared," she said, languidly fanning her flaming cheeks.

"I will retire in favor of the nymph."

"No; I would rather see you now, having no energy left for the contemplation of inside."

Dayton's face lighted up for an instant, and then resumed its gloomy expression.

"Mr. Greydon has gone, and I suppose every one else is off, enjoying themselves," continued Ella.

"I thought Mr. Greydon was a fixture; had come on purpose to see you—that is—"

"Dear me, no!" laughed Ella. "He is on his way to my Aunt Hattie's, who lives at Liverpool. He is to marry my cousin in August; and only stopped here to consult papa about something."

"—Miss Terrell—Ella—dear Ella! I have been such a fool!"

Of course no right minded person would like to intrude into the conversation which followed, suffice to say that two weddings came off in August instead of one, and one happy pair consisted of Ella Terrell and Mr. Perry Dayton.

How He Did not Speculate in Northern Pacific.

He was a well posted but speculative business man—had read of marvellous fortunes which had been won by little puts and calls in Northern Pacific preferred stock. He reflected: he drew his little savings on his way to Wall Street, to do the deed. En route there, he saw an advertisement showing what could be done with $5 invested in a ticket in the Monthly Drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery. He reconsidered, and sent his $5 to M. A. Danphin, New Orleans, La., and drew 10,000 per cent. ($500). He plies those who lose in Northern Pacific Preferred, but rejoice at Louisiana State Lottery Preferred. Next opportunity will be Feb. 12th, when a distribution of over $265,000 will be made.

Every Spring.

HOW AN AFFLICTING ANNUAL VISITOR WAS DRIVEN FROM A WEAKLY WOMAN.

Plain and simple mechanics are not liable to get out of order. Complicated watches, intended not only to keep the time of day, but to mark the movements of the moon and stars, are certain to need frequent repairs. Husband and fathers often fail to see that their wives and daughters are more delicately organized than themselves, requiring corresponding care when they are ill, and well assistance when they are well. Yet much better woman's fine system is a trustworthy mechanic, ready at all times for use, than a deal of tinkering by semi-educated local practitioners.

"Every spring," said the wife a well known employee of the Grand Trunk Railway, Montreal, "I have been for some years past troubled with nervous debility and weakness. It was a burden which so many women are called upon to bear, although none the lighter for that."

"Advice and dosing, to be sure, I had in plenty; still, on each returning spring my sickness came as regularly as the buds and blossoms."

"You seem better now."

"Oh yes! I consider myself almost quite well, and it came about in this way. A lady living on St. Catherine street this city, commended to my attention Sulphur and Iron Bitters. It gave me strength and life. My sister, living in Brockville, whose disease was nearly the same as mine, was equally benefited by the same thing."

"Sulphur and Iron Bitters, prepared by the Cimex Chemical Co., Montreal, is for sale by all druggists. Price, 50 cents."

Cure for Chills.

Bathe the feet for ten or fifteen minutes in water as hot as can be borne; then apply Haysard's Yellow Oil, and a cure is certain. Yellow Oil cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Deafness, Lameness, and pain generally; and internally cures Colds, Sore Throat, Croup, Asthma, and many painful affections.

Why some People are Poor.

—Silver spoons are used to scrape kettles.
—Rags, strings, and paper are thrown into the fire.
—Narrow-handled knives are thrown into hot water.
—Clothes are left on the line to whip to pieces in the wind.
—Tubs and barrels are left in the sun to dry and fall apart.
—Dried fruit are not taken care of in season, and become wormy.
—Pork spoils for the want of salt, and because the brine wastes scalding.
—Coffee, tea, pepper, and spices are left to stand open and lose their strength.
—The floor is soiled in a wasteful manner, and the bread and is left with the dough sticking to it.
—Potatoes in the cellar grow and the sprouts are not removed until the potatoes become worthless.
—Bits of meat, vegetables, bread, and cold pudding are thrown away, when they might be warmed, and served as good as new.
