IN HER TRUE COLORS.

'Alas, who would believe there could be so much trouble in a world that is so beautiful as this!' Mr. Alvord had just come out of ruinous old house in what was called 'The Factory Quarters' at Lidley Village. Down by the river the huge black chimneys belched forth their volumes of murky smoke, while the clang and whir of machinery kept up a ceaseless din within a score of hideous brick buildings. The streets were foul with the cinders from the firepits-wild weed grew among the vacant fields, the heaps of discarded tin cans and broken crockery lay, like miniature mountains. wherever there had been room to dump them. Down on the edge of the river there was a colony of tenement houses -Jagtown it was commonly called, in which poverty wore its most comfort less aspect-and it was out of these wretched places that Mr. Alvord had just issued. He was a young clergyman, and, in consequence of his youth, enthusiastic and earnest,-but old Mrs. Tubb's dirt and infidelity combined had been a most difficult problem for him to solve. And as he stood at the door breathing in the pine scented air, which was so inexpressibly refreshing after the mingled odor of onions and soot which had just filled his lungs, a slight figure glided by. 'Stop a minute,' said Mrs. Alvord. 'Is not this Mary Milton? The girl I have seen at Miss Sexworthy's house!' At this summons Mary stood still, coloring like the reddest rose that 'Yes sir, it is I,' she said, hurriedly

'But I didn't think you would know me 'I am good at remembering faces, said Mr. Alvord—as he looked at Mary Milton he thought that hers was not one to be easily forgotten. A perfec oval, with a lovely pink bloom on the cheek, hazel eyes of the darkest, and luxuriant black hair coiled into a jetty knot behind-all these the faded sunbonnet revealed even while it flapped low over her forehead. 'Please sir,' pleaded Mary, hanging down the graceful little head, "don't mention to Miss Sexworthy that you saw me here.'

'I hope,' he said gravely, 'that you are not bent upon any errand of which you have any reason to be ashamed?" At this Mary blushed deeper than

'Oh, no, no!' she said. 'Only-it's the bit of chicken from dinner. A nice wing and some bits of the breast-bone with good meat on them. Miss Sexworthy told me to give them to the cat. She would be very much vexed if she knew I had brought them here. But I thought of poor old Mrs. Tubbs and the children, who were actually suffering for want of something to eat. Was it very wrong !"

'No,' said Mr. Alvord, 'it was right. But If you had asked Miss Sexworthy's

'She would have said 'No!' Mary un hesitatingly answered. 'She says people have no business to be poor, and that she can't supply all the shiftless vagabonds in Lidley Village. Oh, I've asked her before?"

Here was still another problem. Mr. Alvord did not know what to say, so he very wisely said nothing at all But he thought that Mary Milton must be mistaken. Alicia Sexworthy was so sweet, so pious, so full of wellchosen Scripture quotations and good

Yes, Alicia Seaworthy was very pretty, and how was the unsophisticated young clergyman to know that her bloom was bought at the drug store in a porcelain box, and that her naturally curly hair was hung up by the side of the bureau every night. She called herself just 29, but the family bible would have proclaimed a surplus of ten good years had it tongue to speak-and Alicia was determined to be married at all hazards.

'And I think,' Miss Sexworthy said to her chief confidante, Mrs. Bibbs, the minister's wife. It's so genteel, you know.' 'Humph!' said Mrs. Bibbs. 'Perhaps some other of the young ladies of Lidley Village think so too.' 'Well,' said Alicia, with a laugh, there was not a hearty conviction in her at Miss Sexworthy's house the evening of the very day on which he met Mary Milton down in the comfortless precincts of Jagtown. Miss Sexworthy lived in a pretty white house, with green blinds, and a porch all covered with Michigan roses, as unlike as possible to the forlernity of the tenement buildings by the river. And old Mr. Sexworthy was sitting in the porch with his chair tipped back against the wall, reading the newspaper as the parson came up the steps.

'Evening, sir, evening,' said Mr Sexworthy, who was a respectable old dummy, with very little to say for himself. 'I hope I see you well. Walk into the parlor! Alicia's down stairs daughters are more delicately organized talking to Mary Milton, but she'll be up directly. She didn't expect you so when they are ill. Yet much better for soon. Mary Milton is my wife's cousin, once removed-I don't know as you've met her yet !

'Your wife's cousin?' said Mr. Alvord, 'I thought Miss Sexworthy told me that she was the bound girl!'

'Well, it's much the same thing,' said Mr. Sexworthy, polishing his spectacles with the corner of his yellow, silk pocket-handkerchief. 'She's here to help with the housework. We can't afford to pamper her up like a lady !'

All this was a new revelation to Mr. Alvord. Could it be possible that the fair Alicia had all along been deceiving A lady living on St. Catherine street this city, commended to my attention Sulphur him? However, he proceeded into the and Iron Bitters. It gave me strength genteel sanctuary of the parlor, where the vases were full of sweet-williams and lite. old time-piece in the hall.

As he sat there, the voice of Miss Alicia herself came shrilly up from the cellar below. For, imagining the parlor to be a little 'stuffy,' she had unguardedly opened the register, which connected with a portable furnace down in the cellar, and forgotten to close it again. And now, all unconscious of her auditor above stairs, she was harranguing Mary Milton in a high-pitched, falsetto voice.

'It's all nonsense, you refusing to help me finish that dress Sunday after church !' said she. 'I must have it for the Sunday school picnic on Monday. am not going to wear any crumpy old thing, when there is that dotted muslin half made up, in the house.

'But, Alicia-' ' Don't you call me Alicia,' sharply nterrupted the lady. 'Miss Sexworthy sounds a great deal better from you!' 'If I were to rise very, very early on

'It would be no use,' said Alicia, resolutely. 'I don't choose to run any risks. You must finish the dress after church on Sunday afternoon!'

' But please, Alicia-Miss Sexworthy mean-it wouldn't be right. It not what Mr. Alvord has taught us!' 'Upon-my-word !' sarcastically exclaimed Miss Sexworthy, 'things have come to a pretty pass when you take it upon you to lecture me! course that's the way all ministers talk.

It don't mean anything! And how is he to know about it?' 'My own conscience-' murmured the soft, pleading voice-and Mr. Alvord could picture to himself the drooping head, the large, pathetic eyes of the pretty young brunette. 'Oh your own conscience, indeed? spitefully retorted Miss Alicia. vants have no business to have consciences-and I say, Mr. Alvord, or no Mr. Alvord, you shall finish that dress for me Sunday afternoon after church or out you bundle from this house? 'I can not, Alicia! O, please don't ask me!' fluttered poor Mary. 'I'll get | up before light on Monday-I'll promise you shall have the dress, if only-' 'Very well,' said Alicia, in accents of concentrated wrath, 'if you propose to be preacher and parson, no more church for you! 'Good gracious me-there's that register wide open! How could I ever have forgotten to shut it?'

Mr. Alvord met her at the parlor door. He was a little rosier than his usual wont, but there was an expression in his face that was new to Miss Alicia. 'Miss Sexworthy,' he said, 'I have unwittingly-I may almost say unwillingly-been an auditor to your conversation with Miss Milton down stairs. Need I add that it has been a revelation to me? 'Oh, Mr. Alvord!' 'Excuses are unnecessary,' said Mr.

Alvord. 'I can only add that I have been pleased and surprised at Miss Milton's spirit and conscientiousness? And if, as you hint, you intend to make it so disagreeable for her that she can not endure longer to remain in this her natural home, I know a lady-Mrs. Major Villars-who will be glad to receive her as a companion for an indefinite period of time, at a moderate salary. Mary Milton herself came forward at these words. 'Oh,' she cried, clasping her hands. shall be most glad-most thankful! For no one can tell how wretched I have been here!

That was the end of her slavery in the Sexworthy house. And Mr. Alvord came no more to listen to Miss Alicia's artless confession and to eat her orange marmalade! The Most Successful Remedy ever discovered, as Saved Him 1,800 Dollars DR. B. J. KENDALL & Co., Gents: Having used a good deal of your Kendall's Spavin Cure with great success, I thought I would let you know what it has done for me. Two years ago I had as speedy a colt as was ever raised in Jefferson County. When I was breaking him, he kicked over the cross bar and got fast and tore one of his hind legs all to pieces. I employed the best far-riers, but they all said he was spoiled. He had a very large thorough-pin, and I used two bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure, and it took the bunch entirely of, and he sold afterwards for $1800 (dollars.) I have used it for bone spavins and wind galls, and it has always cured completely and left It is a splendid medicine for rheumatism. 1 have recommended it to a good many, and they all say it does the work. I was in Witherington & Kneeland's drug store, in Adams, the other day and saw a very fine picture you sent them. I tried to buy it, but could not ; they said if I would write to you that you would send me one. I wish you would, and I will do you all the good I can.

Kendall's advertisements-especially of a certain Spavin Cure. We have had dealings with Dr. Kendall for many years, and we know of some large business houses in cities near by who have also dealt with him for many years, and the truth is fully and faithfully proven, not only that he is a good honest man, and that his celebrated Spavin Cure is not only all that it is recommended to be, but that the English Language is not capable of recommending it too highly.

Kendall's Spavin Cure will cure spavins. There are hundreds of cases in which that has been proven to cur certain knowledge, but, after all, if any person confines the usefulness of this colories. READY - MADE CLOTHING, person coufines the usefulness of this celebrated medicine to curing spavins alone, they make a big mistake. It is the best medicine known as an outward application for rheumatism in the human family. It is good for pains and aches, swellings, lameness, and is just as safely applied to men, wo men and children as it is to horses. We know that

In case of splint I find it has no equal, one case I had was of three years standing and the Spavin Cure removed it entirely. I had a cow get spavined and it entirely cured her. One year age, a twoed and it entirely cured her. One year ago a two hundred pound block of ice fell out of a wagon striking my foot on instep and toes, it would be mpossible to mash a foot worse without breaking any bones. I was taken home and carried into the house. I do not think amputation of the leg would cause any more pain. I sent for Kendall's Spavin Cure, it was all I used, and in six days I could walk around. About three weeks ago my ran away and threw me out of the wagon, the hind wheel struck my knee.
